OREGON WEATHER
Fair, continued warm; gentle & northerly zephyrs.

LAST ILLNESS OF THE "SICK MAN"

It has been said by men profoundly versed in European politics that the key to the European war situation lies in Constantinople, and the Turk holds it.

That judgment was based upon conditions that made up the old order in which it was generally admitted, that all the powers, severally, or in their respective groups, were committed to the policy of the Turk holding the bridge between the two continents rather than surrendering it to the other fellow.

When we say that Constantinople is the bridge between Europe and Asia that is almost literally the fact. It is the actual link of interchange between the steam and electric driven, high-tension life of the West, and the odorless, spice-laden, gem-studded enchantment of the East.

We have drawn much from those Asiatic millions, and we are destined to draw much more. In their working and their dreaming they have contributed for centuries to European wealth, philosophy, religion, arts, poetry and architecture.

To control that portal and make it the vital center of an extensive Ottoman empire has been the Turkish dream, realized for the first time in the eleventh century and maintained with wavering fortunes ever since.

the arch enemy, but in no friendship was there sincerity, any further than the hope that the Turk would serve a particular imperial ambition, or be held on the chess board of international politics to block another particular ambition of the same sort.

Since the establishment of national autonomy in the Balkans the Turk faced a new menace. He became aware that his empire in Europe had been divested of reality and reduced to a mere name. There was the power of aggressiveness and a growing organization there; there were hatreds destined to flame into consuming fire, as they did. The Balkans threatened to be the acute and fatal attack in the long illness of the Turk.

It was entirely logical that the Turk should have joined forces with the central powers. The Turk was led to believe in the boasted superhuman power of the alleged Olympic god at Berlin. The picture of pan-Germanism presented to him, promised at least a secure, though a subordinate place in the sun.

Germany has lost. The forces that are working German defeat are stripping the Turk. Whether or not Constantinople is key to this war, those powers will take it from the Turk. They will leave him naked and dispossessed, for the day of the new order has dawned in which there is no international need to keep a sick obstructionist as guard and keeper of the bridge between two civilizations.

SERGEANT WHITE STIRS CROWD

According to the returned soldier the boys had their minds on everything but the war. And he says that is as it should be. When they get to the front they will experience the tortures of hell as the German gas and Jack Johnsons come over.

Judge John H. Stevenson delivered a punchy and powerful address. He urged the buying of bonds, but mostly he demanded an unalloyed loyalty from every citizen, regardless of the place of his birth.

winning the war. The judge urged that every citizen sacrifice to the limit to buy bonds to assure the safety and comfort they are now enjoying, and he warned them against German peace propaganda during the coming winter.

"Germany can have a dictated peace, and one dictated by the allies. They will get it when they make an unconditional surrender," said the speaker.

In the party were: Judge John H. Stevenson, Sergeant H. L. White, Eric V. Hauser Jr., K. L. Noerenberg and Mark Woodruff.

Mr. Hauser is a son of Eric V. Hauser, owner of the Multnomah hotel at Portland, who is financing the tour of the Yellow Demon.

BIG CARNIVAL AND BAZAAR

where you can trip over the floors to the jazziest music that was ever jazzed by a jazzer. It will be great. However, if you have rheumatism or the gout and don't feel like shaking your tribbles, there is yet one of the most interesting parts of the great carnival awaiting your presence.

But there are other things besides the fancy work, and as a "bargain counter" the ladies have a store that beats the Susie Sawbuck catalogue a mile.

Don't miss the carnival tonight and tomorrow night. Tomorrow the bazaar will be opened at 10 o'clock and will be kept open all day. The big carnival will start in the evening.

Today the Red Cross ladies served a fine dinner in the Chamber of Commerce rooms to an immense crowd, and the performance will be repeated tomorrow noon, at the same place.

It is reported today that hundreds are preparing to attend the carnival Saturday night.

Every time you spend at the bazaar and carnival is a boost for our boys "over there."
