THE FRENCH WAY OF SPRINGING A SURPRISE

Paris, Sept. 26.—The French knack of giving a witty turn to the most sinister aspects of life was exemplified in an artistic, although somewhat startling manner recently during a Y. M. C. A. secretary's visit to one of the trenches. The "Y" man had taken along a lot of provisions and tobacco and cigarettes. The corporal on duty said there had been a dearth of smokes for several days and that the soldiers would be delighted to get them. "But," he said, "they will appreciate the gift a hundred fold if it comes to them in some extraordinary way."

Thereupon he arranged the packages along the parapet of the trench which looked out into "No Man's" land. Then he sounded the "alerte" which brought the soldiers pell-mell out of their abris to repel what they thought was an attack by the Germans. Judge of their pleasant surprise when they found themselves facing, not Huns, but packages of the long-longed for tobacco and cigarettes.
