A DOG'S LIFE—DO YOU WANT A NICE DOG?

There is a dog in this town. We don't mean that Grants Pass sports but one dog, for there are as many dogs here now as there are fleas on a dog's back in August. We have all kinds—from the common "soup variety" to heavy-jowled, brass-colored "bulls." And by the way, there is a law prohibiting the carrying of revolvers, yet some men are permitted to carry bull dogs with them, which are a much more dangerous weapon.

But to go back to "Shep." The local police have arrested him three times and placed him in jail, and three times has he made his escape—probably while being taken out for exercise or for luncheon. It is said that he is not a very bad dog at that and would make a nice pet for some boy or girl, although he displays good judgment and shows a preference for girls; in fact it is rumored that he once bit a boy.

However, anyone who wants "Shep" will have to intervene quickly, as Chief of Police McLane has passed sentence upon the Collie and he is to be shot when next caught in the police dragnet. If you want a dog, tell the police.

MAYAS INDIANS BEFORE INCAS

Race That Has Long Since Disappeared Ranked With the Aztecs in Scale of Civilization.

Prescott's Conquest of Peru accounts for the popular belief that all the people of this country were Incas. The truth is that the greatest part of the textiles of ancient Peru belongs to a people that had passed away before the Incas tribes reached the coast.

The Mayas were the ancient race of Indians which settled in the lowlands of Guatemala in Central America. They ranked with the Aztecs in civilization. They excelled in sculpture, cotton weaving and feather work. About the sixth century they are supposed to have disappeared. They left behind them cities like ancient Quirigua, now a mass of ruins overgrown by the jungle. Half buried by tropical growth today the archeologists are uncovering huge monoliths sculptured with strange designs and each bearing a giant face. The Mayas have disappeared, but the Indians, forming more than half the population of Guatemala, are their direct heirs. Their bright-colored blankets and scarfs, their primitive methods of barter, their open-air markets filled with great heaps of strange stuffs and articles, should capture the imagination of any modern textile designer with ideas.

Little-Known Chinese Race.

Down in the extreme south of China, in the eastern outposts of the Himalayas, lies the little-known province of Yunnan. The natives of Yunnan are exceptionally interesting, writes Roy Chapman Andrews in Asia. There are about thirty non-Chinese tribes in the province, some of which, such as the Shans, Mosos and Lolo, represent the aboriginal inhabitants of China.

The Mosos formerly ruled all of northern Yunnan. At present they are scattered in remote districts where white men seldom penetrate. They are a simple, honest and delightful people, primitive and pastoral. They are looked down upon by the Chinese as barbarians. The invariable Moso costume is a brown felt cloak and close-fitting cap.

"Seek and ye shall find" is a great truth (says the Philosopher of Folly) but it can be overdone. For instance the man who is always hunting for a job is the man who never seems to find one.

Nothing in a Name.

"Namin' a boy 'George Washin'-tn,'" said Uncle Eben. "Is as much a sign dat he's g'ineter be truthful as namin' a mule 'Job' is a sign dat he's g'ineter be patient."

Very Good Reason.

One reason a man has more pockets than a woman is because his collar is too tight to permit him to throw things down his shirt front.—Galveston News.

'The Great Love' with practically the same cast as "Hearts of the World" and "The Birth of a Nation"

They are all fighting the War; the man who shoulders the gun and the woman who is transfigured by the Great Love—the love that places country above all else.

You see the Dowager-Queen Alexandra, Lady Diana Manners, Miss Asquith and a host of England's "proudest" working side by side with the most lowly Londonites.
