WATCH YOUR VOTE

The Oregonian states that those who neglected to vote at the 1917 election, and who fail to vote at the election next month, will be placed in a position where their registration is subject to cancellation.

There was a special election in 1917 throughout every county which drew out only a partial vote. If those who failed to vote then neglect that duty next month, their registration will be subject to cancellation.

Within a given period after notice a canceled registration may be restored by mail notice to the county clerk. If not thus restored the voter who desires to vote in the presidential election in 1920 will have to register in person at the office of the county clerk.

ARE YOU A KNOCKER?

Portland is starting a campaign, or at least is trying to arouse interest among her citizens, to patronize home industries; to persuade Portlanders to buy their clothes, produce, hardware, grain, bread—in fact everything they need—right in that city instead of sending their money out of town.

Nothing is more discouraging to local business men, and nothing will make a town a "dead town" quicker than for a majority of the citizens to get the mania for "sending away" for everything they need. Clothing, bread, groceries, shoes, drugs, hardware and many other articles are shipped into this place.

A peculiar part of this "sending away" business is the fact that women are the worst offenders. Knowing that the feminine mind turns to advertisements, the mail order houses flood their homes with attractive descriptions of their goods, and as a result many an order for millinery, dress goods, etc., is sent through the mail—and the money never comes back, thus leaving the local community that much poorer.

Grants Pass is no worse than any other small city in this respect, but isn't it about time that you were waking up to the fact that every time you send an order away it is a knock on your home town?

Joe Knowles, "nature man," he who threw aside the fig leaf and bared his epidermis to the wilds of Oregon a few years ago to prove that he could survive in the primitive state, wants to catch the kaiser and turn him loose among the wild animals in some wilderness to see if he will survive—be able to paddle his own canoe, as it were. Joe must hold a grudge against the wild animals.

The dragging away of 15,000 people of the city of Lille by the Germans does not merely mean that 15,000 people have been taken prisoner. It means that just about that number will be changed into physical wrecks—wrecks and nothing less—for some will be almost worked to death, some will be beaten, while many will be starved.

A man today reading the bulletin wherein it is stated that the Germans "will announce immediate suspension of warfare and other political guarantees," pondered a moment and then said: "I wonder what that means." As near as we can tell it means another year of hell on the western front.

Germany points with pride to her atrocities and brutality as "a necessity of war." There could be many answers given in reply to her statement, but the best answer will be a double-barreled dose of concentrated hell just as soon as the allies set foot on Hun soil—hasten the day.

Thus far the Spanish "flu" has not made any great headway in this city, but human nature passeth understanding and many whimsical ones will never be satisfied until they have the "popular" disease. Colds and la grippe are too common.

The Huns may be attempting to halt their brutalities, but in the street vernacular "cruelty is their middle name" and it's a hard job for them to conduct themselves along humanitarian lines.

Governor Withycombe states that he is so busy with war work that he will not make a campaign. Withycombe is faithfully staying at his post of duty.

America's answer to Hun cruelty is the raising of a $6,000,000,000 loan in three weeks' time by 20,000,000 of her citizens.

Gott hasn't deserted the kaiser—he was never with him.

Our reply should be framed in two words, "unconditional surrender."

Have you gone "fluey" yet?

FACTORS IN KEEPING BEES SUCCESSFULLY

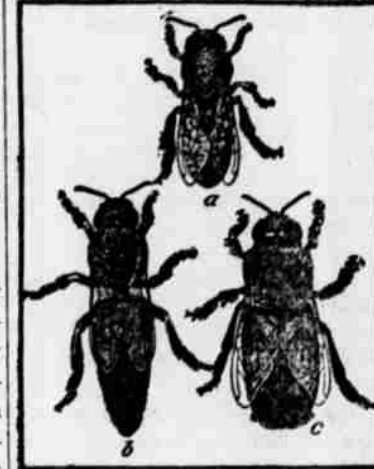

Honey is Splendid Substitute for Sugar, Now in Demand.

Failure to Provide Proper Care in Winter and Spring May Result in Almost Total Failure—Plenty of Stores.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beekeeping can be made a profitable side line on the farm. When properly managed bees make a good supply of honey, which is a splendid substitute for sugar—now in great demand. While the essentials of beekeeping are simple and easily understood, it is highly important that the keeper understand the bees and give them the care they need at the proper time.

Success in beekeeping depends on the beekeeper's skill in two lines of effort. First, he must see to it that every colony is strong in numbers at the beginning of the period when nectar is secreted. This is often not accomplished, for if the colony is weakened by poor care in winter the secretion of nectar may begin so early in the season that the bees have not time, without aid, to gain sufficiently in strength.

The Honey Bee—A, Worker; B, Queen; C, Drone (Enlarged).

In the alfalfa region many colonies fail to get nectar from the first crop from the same cause, even though this often comes in July. It is evident, therefore, that a failure to provide proper care in winter and spring may result in almost total failure.

In order to obtain strong colonies in time for the honey flow, the beekeeper must see that every colony is sufficiently strong in bees the previous fall to winter successfully. This can be done by leaving plenty of stores for the bees to feed on, and space for breeding. The bees also require protection from cold and wind during the winter.

A second, and in some regions an equally important, consideration is keeping the colonies from swarming. Where a colony divides itself into two parts by swarming, neither part is able to gather as much surplus honey for the beekeeper as the original colony might have done.

Weeds use up moisture. When they grow in a crop they compete with the crop for the moisture, and weeds usually keep on growing after the crop is cut, thus using moisture that should be saved up for next year's crop.

RED, EMBLEM OF DOMINATION

Has From Time Immemorial Been Significant of High Authority—Blue Called Cloak of Heaven.

Of all bright colors red is the favorite among primitive peoples. It excites to violence in flags and uniforms. Red is the emblem of domination in politics and religion.

On the other hand, red has replaced green in one respect as a restful color. At great state functions out of doors in India, such as a durbar, red umbrellas are preferred to green as an effective sunshade.

Blue has a minor influence. Curiously enough, it appears only to affect the cat in the same way that red affects other animals. Humanity has a respect for blue, which is the cloak of heaven. In legends and fairy tales it is the good little boy, destined to achieve success in life and marry a princess, who is described as clothed in blue, while a red blouse serves for the bad boy.

Ireland's Round Towers.

No one knows exactly when or why the round towers in Ireland were built, but some believe that the druids erected them as watch towers and places to which to go for safety in time of danger.

those which show the cone tops intact have mostly been restored. There is no door on the ground, the doors being purposely built at about 10 or 15 feet from the ground and were reached by ladders.

After the people had climbed inside they drew their ladders up after them and thus were out of reach of the Danes who frequently invaded the country. The tiny windows of these towers are far up toward the top also. About 80 round towers remain in Ireland, but only a few of them are perfect. According to one authority, they were probably built between the 9th and 13th centuries.

HEAR THIS CALL from OUR HOME TOWN BOYS OVER THERE

LETTERS from our boys in the trenches and from the women in canteen and other war work, all bring to us the same message—SEND US NEWS FROM HOME.

World news is all right, but OUR BOYS want NEWS OF THIS TOWN. They want the home newspaper. Publishers are prevented from sending their papers free to anyone, even boys in the service.

Send to the publisher of this newspaper whatever amount of money you can—5 cents or $50.00. We will publish a list each week of those contributing, and the amounts contributed.

Every cent received will be used to send this paper to our boys at the front. If at the end of the war, there is any surplus, it will be turned over to the local Red Cross Committee.

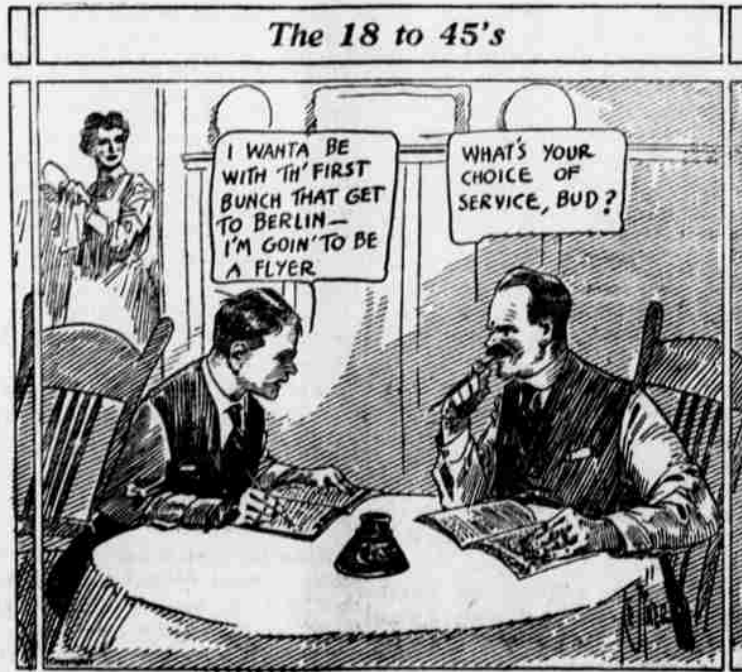

There is no profit in this to the publisher—even in normal times, subscriptions are not sold at a profit. With war prices prevailing, and the high rate of postage on papers sent to France, our cost will scarcely be covered by our full subscription price.

Remember that over in France, some brave soldier or sailor from this town—perhaps even some splendid woman working within sound of the guns—is depending on you to "KEEP THE HOME LOVE KINDLED."
