SHOOTS FLYING FISH FROM PITCHING LAUNCH
 Seattle, Wash., Nov. 1.—When one can score an easy bulls-eye on flying fish, shooting from a launch that rolls and pitches in the Pacific, one is qualified to expect success in downing Boche aviators.
 Such is the belief of Nathan H. Malloy, of Honolulu, who has come here to enlist in the aviation corps. Malloy is the son of a Honolulu sea captain. He spent much of his boyhood in the novel sport of shooting flying fish off Diamond Head, near the entrance to Honolulu harbor. He said the sport was far more exciting than shooting quail or other wild fowl, and the skill acquired after long practice, he believes, will stand him in need when he mounts aloft in an airplane to tackle the German flyer.
