AT THE MOVIES

Synopsis of the "Price of a Good Time."

"Did you ever have a good time?" is the question that Preston Winfield, a young man of wealth and leisure, puts to Linnie Randall, a sad but sweet-faced little beauty who officiates at the perfumery counter in one of his father's mammoth department stores. Preston's folks as well as his aristocratic fiancée are off on a yachting cruise and the family mansion has been left in charge of a discreet caretaker. So Preston offers to give Linnie the time of her life, asking her to state each evening throughout the week where she wants to go.

We see them on successive nights dining at a swell hotel, attending a musical comedy, taking in endless amusements at a nearby summer resort, and dancing at a cabaret. A policeman, who sees Linnie driven to her humble home night after night, communicates his suspicions to Linnie's pugnacious brother, Dick. It is Linnie's whim to spend the last evening at the Preston mansion, where she is apparently tempted beyond her strength. While Preston is making love to her, Dick bursts in through an open window and a violent encounter leads up to an unusual denouncement.

Will Preston be man enough to marry the girl whose life he has broken for a lark, or will he eventually marry his frigid fiancée, and leave poor little Linnie to pay the price of a good time? That is the problem that is worked out in the final reel of this most original and intensely dramatic picture.

BAND LEADER'S QUICK WIT FOILS A RIOT

The quick wit of the leader of a marine corps band prevented what promised to become a serious riot at Mollis field Saturday. Right swings and uppercuts were left incomplete as each marine soldier came instantly to salute and stood at attention while the national anthem was played. There was no further disorder.
