YANKS WIN THE HEARTS OF THE LITTLE HUNS

Coblentz, Dec. 25.—Here on the banks of the Rhine the world seems topsy turvy this Christmas day, 1918. One thinks there was never such a Christmas before. Peace on earth, good will to men, Christmas spirit rules along the Rhine.

When before was the Christmas spirit the measured tread of a foreign army? When before did conquering invaders join in celebrating the nativity in the right and proper spirit with the conquered, but that is what is happening along the Rhine today.

The Christmas tree in the doughboys' barracks and the Christmas tree in the parlor of the German home grew on the same hillside, were bargained for in the same market and in cases which I know were trimmed from the same box of tinseled trappings. If all invitations had been accepted there would be few doughboys at company dinners today, for Christmas is children's day, and where is the kid in this part of Rhineland who has not his doughboy pal—and we are at war with Germany, I believe?

What does this Christmas on the Rhine mean? Who can tell its effect on history? How can you figure it that the American soldiers whom children were calling swine when they came here 10 days ago are now an object of adoration to these same children and of respect to the children's parents? How can you figure it when a soldier with three stripes for wounds which the Germans gave him walks down the street with a toy for the first German child he meets? Figure it any way you want to, it's true.

And when you have figured that out, there is to explain why it is that President Wilson, the man who did more than any other man to crush German hopes for victory, would, if he appeared here this Christmas day get a welcome that would astound the world.

Why is it that on this day the eyes and hearts of Germany are turned hopefully toward America? Oh I have heard that it is all part of a deep-laid plot! But what of deep-laid plots knows the little boy who steps shyly from the sidewalk and then, with growing confidence, to the side of an American soldier and, placing his hand on the butt of a Yankee rifle, marches proudly down the street. Yes, the Germans turn hopefully to America because the doughboy buys a Christmas present for a little enemy. Germany and the German people turn to America because America is full of Christmas spirit.

Seated here by the Rhine and hearing the strains of "America" echo back from the historic hills, one wonders if these echoes will not reverberate for a long time. I know something of the crimes of Germany; something of the hateful trials of Germany. Cancers they are and Germany needs a physician, the Great physician, the secret of whose skill is the spirit of Christmas—the spirit of Christmas 1918, on the Rhine.—Edwin L. James in the Portland Telegram.

Industrial Exemption.
Conscription boards have their troubles, and occasionally a tragedy, but once in a while they have a little joke, too. The local draft board at Scottsburg thinks it has a "good one" on the third district appeal board.

Recently the Scottsburg board sent up papers of a man who sought exemption because of marriage since August 5, 1918. In due time the papers were returned by the appeal board with the ruling "deferred classification refused. Place can be filled by another."

It is presumed that the appeal clerks wrote a reason for refusal of an appeal for exemption on industrial grounds on the papers instead of the one intended for case.—Indianapolis News.

Impediments.
How much stuff does a Yank take into the line? It all depends on the Yank.

In one squad you will see a man carrying full pack, including extra shoes and overcoat, and wearing a whole string of corned Willie cans much as a Fiji Islander wears a loin cloth. Another man in the same squad will go up minus his blouse, and carrying only a blanket, gas mask and helmet.—Paris Stars and Stripes.

INNER MAN WELL FORTIFIED

American Soldier, Ordered to the Front, at Least Did Not Set Out on Mission Hungry.

An American doughboy entered a restaurant in the Rue Richelieu and after carefully studying the menu, ordered dejeuner.

The waitress brought him bacon and eggs, cheese and a pint of beer. When he had finished eating, he paid his bill and called the waitress.

"Now I want some lunch." This time she brought him a plate of roast beef, vegetables and chicken, which he washed down with half a dozen cups of tea; then he paid his bill and called the wondering waitress back again.

"Now, my dear, I want dinner." He ate some beef, vegetables, apples and drank a bottle of wine.

At 1:30, after having taken all three meals at once, the soldier left the restaurant, and a little while later set out on a mission to the front.—Stars and Stripes.

Unfortunate Fact.

There is one guess that is pretty accurate. Men who make speeches like to make them.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Ham
Honesty

YOU wouldn't give a child a bottle of poison to play with.

Yet when you let a child eat ham that is unreliable you run about the same risk.

Some ham, as you very well know, is not fit to eat. It's not properly cured, and it's kept from rotting by poisonous preservatives barred by the pure food law.

It is your duty to buy ham only where you know you'll get the real article. This is most important. Buy here.
