From the Ancient Greeks.

"To throw dust in one's eyes" is a saying derived from the ancient Greeks. Epaminondas, wishing to surprise the Lacedemonians, is said to have caused 1,000 cavalrymen to advance in front, kicking up a great dust which the wind blew into the faces of the enemy, thus blinding them to a flank movement he was executing with a view to taking the coveted heights in the rear.

Where Men Wear Combs.

In Ceylon, the Singhniese men wear long hair, twisted into a coll at the back of the head, and a horseshoeshaped tortolse-shell comb at the top. while the women wenr no such ornament. The men vie with one another in the quality and finish of the comb. This custom supports a large numher of comb-makers, who get the raw material from the bawk's-bill turtle.

SOLDIERS SAVED BY COLD STORAGE BLOOD

Washington, Feb. 19 .- "Canned scribed today by the surgeon genfamilies of hundreds of soldiers whose lives were saved by blood transfusion. One of the heaviest causes of death among wounded soldiers is hemorrhage. Immediately after the United States entered the war the medical department began organizing to reduce the number of fatilities from this cause.

Development of the use of "canned blood" was a direct resurt of war conditions. During a heavy attack it was impossible to arrange for transfusions direct from persons, so the fluid was drawn previously. stored on ice in sterile flasks and used in emergency cases. Where the wounded men could stand it, a blood substitute was injected which sustained life until he could be removed to a hospital where more direct transfusion could be employed.
