FARM POULTRY PAYS SAYS LOCAL LEADER

(Farm Poultry Life.)

Some interesting figures on the income from poultry on the farms have recently been published by the federal department of agriculture. These figures were compiled from a survey of 25 farms in Ohio and probably fairly represent average farm conditions.

Doubtless many will be somewhat surprised to learn that poultry was the second highest source of income on these farms, averaging $163 per farm, of which $138 was for eggs. Nearly half the farms realize over $200 annually from poultry and eggs. This was accomplished, according to the government report, "without serious interference with the other farm operations," with prices ranging from 15 to 38 cents and with hens that laid only 86 eggs a year. It is not difficult to figure the increase in revenue that could be made by replacing the low-producing mongrel flocks with good stock.

As a revenue producer, the farm flock of poultry ranks ahead of many other classes of livestock, and the report of this survey states that "In addition to this enterprise being one of the leading sources of income, it is further commendable because its receipts are distributed throughout the year. They are greatest during the early spring and summer months, but there is not a month in the year without some receipts from this source. Poultry is also of considerable importance as a source of the home food supply."

Many people raising poultry think of increased production only along the line of increased numbers. This is a mistake. The necessary object to be kept in view now is increased revenue, and this can be done better by raising poultry along lines of practical common sense experience. In other words, it is better to raise ten good strong vigorous broilers, roasters or layers that will fetch you $15 than to raise 15 that will only fetch you $12 or possibly at the most $15. This extra value can be gotten only through following our "Essential Features," the chief one now being early hatching. For information as regards the other features get in touch with your local leader or community committeeman, county or home demonstration agent, or write your state college. THEO. P. CRAMER, Local Poultry Leader.
