A photodrama that will put new courage into America's hearts, the sort of a play that lifts dark thoughts into the sunshine

HERE'S A RECOMMENDATION THAT MEANS A LOT

By Margaret E. Sangster, in the Christian Herald

Some people—many people, know the story of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird." Everybody should know it. And now that the producers of Artcraft Pictures have put the story into a perfect picture, there is no reason why everyone should not know it.

The Christian Herald does not often feel that it can heartily endorse a film, for many film stories are, regrettably, not the sort of thing that one could take one's small, or older, son or daughter to see. But "The Blue Bird" is the sort of film that holds a lesson worth learning. It is the kind of a film few people have dreamed of producing—an idealistic picture made real by splendid acting and remarkable photography.

Several points stand out from the story—stand out by sheer beauty of word and action. When the children go at twelve o'clock to the graveyard to see the dead arise—when they tiptoe fearfully in through the door and walk in frightened silence, past the yawning tombs, one can perfectly understand why folk fear death. But, when suddenly the graves burst forth into blossoms and the roses and lilies grow fragrantly all about, one sees the Easter story retold in a marvelous way. For the little boy, astounded, asks—"Where are the dead?" and the girl-child, with a triumphant smile upon her face answers—"There are no dead!"

The moving picture has come to stay—come to stay with its unlimited possibilities for good or for evil. And "The Blue Bird" is the sort of picture that cannot fail to do unlimited good. It will be a delight to children, but only the grown-ups can read their lives into the search for Happiness. It will be a dream, a fairy-tale come true, to your boy or girl; but to you it will be the meaning of life, told poetically, but none the less truly.

"The Blue Bird" is a milestone in the production of motion pictures. We hope for more pictures of the same sort.

"Happy Though Married"

The bride suspected that her husband was a cynic and did not really love her; and the photograph she found seemed to indicate "a past." When the beautiful Spanish girl appeared on the scene it seemed to clinch matters, but when all was explained she was "Happy Though Married."
