THE EVOLUTION OF LABOR

One of the best statements of industrial policy that have appeared lately comes from Henry T. Noyes, a Rochester (N. Y.) manufacturer. "Labor will have more to say in industry," he says. "We shall have shop committees, grievance committees and wage boards in the industry of the future."

"The rights of the workers include reasonable wages, based on the cost of living; reasonable hours; adequate provision for recreation and education, protection against loss through sickness, accident and unemployment, and service annuities. Labor should assert these as matters of inherent right, and not as charitable concessions."

But this is not all. Along with these gains, the workmen, he insists, must consider the interests of the institution they are working for just as they expect their employer to consider their interest. And recognizing that this is probably only an intermediate step, Mr. Noyes adds:

"With it, labor must learn to carry responsibility. If some time in the future the people should wish to do away with capital, labor should have acquired such training in the management of industry as to make that possible. I believe we will progress through evolution and not revolution."

Here, certainly, is something for both employers and employes, but particularly the latter, to think about. In Russia we have seen unskilled workmen trying to run industries under the authority of a bolshevist government, and making a mess of it. That will hardly be tried in America. But there is sure to be progress in the direction of more active participation of labor in management. Our great industries may eventually become genuine partnerships of capital and labor; they may even become economic democracies, so to speak—constituent units of a great industrial state. The trend seems in that direction. All the more reason then why workmen, instead of fighting "capitalists" should study their methods and cooperate with them, accepting responsibility and developing by natural degrees so that they will be ready for whatever comes.

HORSES THRIVING

If the automobile is to drive the horse completely into the background it has got to do better than it has so far.

are now about 21,534,000 horses in the United States. This country furnished about 2,200,000 horses for the war. That was supposed to make serious inroads on the horse population. In spite of that war record, however, and in spite of the rapid increase in the number and use of motor driven vehicles, the number of horses has increased instead of diminished since the great automobile increase began. In 1900 there were 18,267,026 horses in the United States, over 3,000,000 less than there are today.

"The Anarchistic Soviet Bulletin" is the title of an interesting publication that is being distributed among the people with the assistance of Mr. Burleson and his postoffice officials. Thousands of copies have been received and delivered by postmen to addresses in Patterson, New Jersey. In the Bulletin it is stated that 650,000 copies have been printed. Just how many of them have been entrusted to Mr. Burleson for safe delivery is not mentioned, but copies have appeared in the mail not only in Paterson but in the city of Washington, and probably have gone to many other parts of the country. Is it not about time that a department of the government should cease to be made an agency for self-destruction?

A few months back the president thought nothing could be done in this country without his personal initiative or approval. Now he is content to stay away and give no attention to domestic problems. Either he was unduly insistent upon the importance of his personal attention in the past or he is grossly negligent now.

FRUITDALE

Allen Underwood was Saturday night guest of his grandfather, A. Bauer, and J. H. Harris.

Gail Hamilton, Margaret Rathbone and Ernest and Anna Neilson called at the Charlie Peterson home Sunday.

Mrs. F. F. Byington was in Fruitdale Tuesday and called on Mrs. Roper, Mrs. Bates and Mrs. Hamilton.

Glen Hamilton has been playing in the orchestra at the Christian church the past two weeks. Digger squirrel time has come and Fred Roper the official poison mixer says he has a batch ready for distribution.

The William Williams family were guests of the W. G. Potts family Sunday.

Anna Neilson spent two days in town last week the guest of Carlotta Wiseman.

J. H. Harris and A. Bauer were dinner guests at the Bates home Sunday.

Margaret Rathbone, Gail Hamilton and Ernest, Anna and Robert Neilson attended the party given by Mrs. Dubuis in Grants Pass, Monday night.

Mrs. Roper received as callers this week, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hamilton coming on Sunday; Mrs. Rankin and Mrs. Goettsche on Monday, and Mrs. Nazor, of Grants Pass, Mrs. Hyde, of Portland, and Mrs. Briggs, of Eugene, on Tuesday.

Preston Byington writes that he is still very busy in France. They have about 500 patients in the hospital, with influenza, pneumonia and other contagious diseases and the doctors are busy in the operating rooms all day and sometimes into the night.

Glen Hamilton took a bunch of seniors in his car on their annual pilgrimage to Table Rock last Saturday.

AT THE MOVIES

What Would You Do If You Had $40,000,000

Walshingham Van Dorn, the hero of "Too Many Millions," Wallace Reid's new Paramount picture which will be shown at the Joy theatre tonight and Saturday, faced that problem and found it a tough one.

In a delightful romantic comedy Wallace Reid shows how Walshingham staggered along for a while under the weight of forty millions, how they were suddenly taken from him, how a beautiful girl demanded two millions that had been stolen from her father, how he and the girl were suddenly stranded without any money and how they lost most of their clothes in a fire. They suddenly married, they live happily on the money the young man earns until the time when the forty millions are again returned to them. Do they take them? For the answer we refer you to the picture.
