A RACE FOR BATTLESHIPS?

Joe Daniels, secretary of the navy, says a large naval international police force will be necessary under the league of nations plan to maintain peace. "The desire of conquest may still linger in the hearts of some nations," says the secretary, "and they must be shown that it will be unprofitable to attempt to accomplish those desires."

So a big navy and bristling armament is to be the program of the peace league, is it? And is the dove of peace to be an angel with a bomb in one talon while the other grasps a container of poison gas? It's to be a new kind of peace, according to Daniels, and perhaps you do not see the point—neither do we. The nations signing the league pact already have practically all the navy there is in the world, yet some are insisting that there be a bigger one, possibly to retain the "balance of power," as hinted at some months ago by Mr. Clemens. That wily old Frenchman is getting what he wanted after all, except the order is to be delivered under another name.

Perhaps Daniels and Wilson are right in planning a big navy, but let us give any nation with "the desire of conquest in its heart" credit for having enough brains to not fight the league alone. If a break is made it will be by two or more of the powerful nations—what they might safely consider at least an equal division of power.

Let's have the league, but why should the nations composing the league be burdened with a big navy? After all, is it to be a race for the "balance of power?" If the nations of the league begin building a large navy it is reasonable to suppose that the other nations will undoubtedly try to keep up with the procession.

MR. CLARK TELLS STORY

ment recognized at the beginning of the war that a great economic waste existed in the fact that rolled oats were shipped from Iowa to Oregon, one of the great grain states of the union, and along with other items made necessary the slogan the food administration to "Save Cans—Buy Local Foods."

"More and more the people of the state are coming to recognize that if Oregon is to take its place as a manufacturing state more of the home market should go to the Oregon manufacturer. If this support is given it means that it will enable to more quickly reach out to distant communities for business and bring new wealth into the state. Wherever large groups are employed in factories it means that more of the products of the farm, dairy, and orchard must be raised to supply the factory worker, thus the producer merchant, in fact every line, is aided in the distribution of pay roll money."

In referring to local conditions Mr. Clark said:

"The local merchant if he expects to keep himself in step with competitors of large buying centers or with the mail order houses, must in some degree make similar efforts to get the business. The suggestive, newsy, style used by the large department houses and the catalogue firms paint such a picture as influence the buyer and a similar style, with plenty of illustrations can be effectively used by the local merchant is always open in support of every local community movement, charities, etc., and he is entitled to his home trade and a preference at all times."

EAST MEETS WEST IN BARNES' CIRCUS

East is East and West is West. But the two at least have met.

Since the days of P. T. Barnum it has been the privilege of showmen to upset the natural order of events and defy the laws of nature in order that many may be amused. Pink elephants, double jointed monkeys and unmentionable monstrosities as well as the original and genuine of nature's freaks have been presented to the world through the media of the white tops.

In more recent years showmen have striven to give the beautiful and instructive features to the public and like an Aladdin's lantern the big tops have become a veritable paradise of enchantment.

The Al G. Barnes big four-ringed animal circus is coming to Grants Pass May 15 for a one-day exhibit, giving afternoon and night performances, and as its opening feature this season presents a fairyland fantasy, namely, "Alice in Wonderland," which promises to outrival in reality anything Lewis Carroll's character, "Alice," saw in her dreamland jaunt through Wonderland.

Alice is a delightful child who falls asleep upon a rustic seat in a park, fairies appear and by magic bring to her a king in all his royal splendor, who, wishing to please Alice and show his many possessions, orders the royal jungle to appear. Instantly a magnificent pageant comprising the show's entire aggregation of animals and people richly and sumptuously adorned come forth: a riot of color, a jingle of music, Rajahs, queens, kings, knights and their royal cortege in fitting equipment, jungle natives, magnificent horses, all handsomely caparisoned—in fact, a festive feast of fairyland wonder.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR

A MOTHER wants to be sure and certain that the medicine she gives her child is safe. She wants no opiates or habit-forming drugs. She wants a medicine that she knows other mothers have used with satisfaction and success.

Mother's Command Foley's

Such a family cough and cold remedy is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It meets squarely and satisfactorily every demand a mother can make as to purity and wholesomeness. It is clearly made of the very best ingredients which she would use herself if she could always get them in a fresh and pure condition.

When she insists on Foley's Honey and Tar she gets at a moderate price (less than she would pay if she bought the ingredients at retail and mixed them herself) a standard medicine that has been used successfully in thousands of homes for many years—a medicine that experience proves is the best she can buy.

Safest For Children

Mother's who have used it know Foley's is safe and no harm will come even if an overdose is given by accident. It tastes good and doesn't injure the most delicate stomach. It promptly checks coughs, colds and croup. It should be kept in the family medicine chest "year round"—always ready when needed.

SYDNAM MURDER TRIAL STIRS CURRY COUNTY

Marshfield, May 5.—War, and the horrors of the battlefields of France, are to be the defense of George Chenoweth, of Curry county, charged with second degree murder for shooting and killing George Sydnam, a Langlois boy of 18 years, who is alleged to have seduced Chenoweth's daughter during the service of the father in the Canadian army overseas.

In the motion asking for the postponement of the case, filed with Judge Coke last week in Curry county circuit court session, it is indicated that temporary insanity and not the unwritten law will be the grounds on which Chenoweth's freedom from a life sentence in the penitentiary will be sought.

Forty days of almost continuous service on the firing line, during part of which time Chenoweth was unconscious as the result of the intensity of the battle, and a long period of illness in hospitals in England will be brought into the case.

Evidence of two nurses formerly at Tooting hospital, London, and a Scotchman who was in the bed next him, will be secured from England.

Evidence of members of the state legislature as to Chenoweth's gloom and queer action will be brought into the case also. Oscar Horn, of Multnomah county; Lewis R. Bean, of Lane county, and T. J. Thrift and I. S. Smith are named.

Chenoweth's wife and daughter Neva, alleged to have been wronged, and the child of the latter were in attendance at the court session in Gold Beach. Chenoweth is said to be very thin.
