COW CREEK ROAD NOT BAD AS REPORTED

Floyd H. Wilkins of the Automobile Record of Portland, spent Sunday in Grants Pass, continuing on south this afternoon. He came through the Cow Creek canyon Sunday night after 5 o'clock without difficulty. He states that a story in the Oregonian Sunday gives a wrong impression of conditions in the canyon. He experienced no difficulty and made 12 miles through the road work in an hour and thirty minutes.

Mr. Wilkins called to mind a number of the new automobile laws which are not generally understood, one of them being the spot-light clause, which provides that on meeting a vehicle the lights must be dimmed. Any vehicle not equipped with dimming device must maintain a spot light, which, after head lights are turned out, must be thrown downward to the right. There is also a provision allowing the collection of damages for an owner when the car is not equipped with spot light or dimming device should an accident be caused to an approaching car.

The speed limit is raised to 30 miles an hour except in towns or cities, which shall be 20 miles unless other speed limit is announced by bulletin boards.

The vehicle law went into effect on March 4, 1919.

Last year the Oregon registration of automobiles totaled 63,367. To April 12 this year the registration was 62,992, and it is estimated that the total for the year will reach from 75,000 to 80,000. Josephine county's total to date is around 550.

SUSPECT TO BE HELD FOR FEDERAL TRIAL

The man arrested here by local officers Saturday noon, accused of having nitroglycerine, dynamite caps, fuse and a gun in his possession, is still in the county jail. He gives his name as Thompson, says he formerly lived in Texas, but is lately from California. Today several photographs were taken of him at the courthouse. At first he refused, hid his face and twisted about, but when the officers threatened to hold or tie him fast he consented.

Near where Thompson alighted from the freight train Saturday a brakeman found a small bottle of liquid, supposed to be some sort of explosive, and an I. W. W. card, which is thought to belong to Thompson, although there is no proof of this as 15 or 20 hoboes got off the same train. The name on the I. W. W. card is J. J. Loftus, showing that such a person joined that organization at Stockton, Cal.

The liquid found in one bottle Saturday proved to be genuine nitroglycerine. Deputy Sheriff Lister placed a speck of the liquid on the stone step at the courthouse and when struck with a hammer there was a sharp explosion.

Three of the men found traveling with Thompson are being held here and will probably be taken to Portland by U. S. officials when Thompson is taken to that city tomorrow. They are the ones who testified against Thompson and the officers believe them to be honest workmen. Deputy U. S. Marshal Bryan of Portland has been in the city today investigating Thompson's case.
