FOR SOLDIERS' EDUCATION

The Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines' educational financial aid bill in one measure that mothers of Oregon soldiers are working for. They are asking for its passage so the boys who answered war's call and left before their education was completed will have a chance to finish their schooling.

The bill is designed to aid each soldier who wants to finish his schooling, but is financially embarrassed, to the extent of $25 a month or not more than $200 a year.

The Oregonian, in recommending the various measures for passage at the June election, does not commit itself on this measure for the soldiers, but the mothers of Oregon soldiers war auxiliary committee has this to say in regard to the bill:

"No man or woman whose life and property was protected by the valor of our boys and who feels any sense of gratitude for their splendid valor and sacrifice can deny the opportunity to complete an education to any one of them. While $25 a month will not pay the expense of schooling, it will help substantially and it will show that Oregon is not ungrateful."

BERGER AND CONGRESS

Victor L. Berger, the Milwaukee congressman convicted of disloyalty under the espionage act, seemed surprised at the rebuff given him when he tried to take his seat in the house, and still more surprised by the chilly attitude of his colleagues. It is surprising to normal Americans that he should have expected anything else.

Berger had called this war "a business man's war, whose object is profits, not democracy." He had denounced it as "the supreme horror of capitalism," and "the most imperialistic war ever known in the history of the world."

The war had been declared by an overwhelming vote of congress, in obedience to an overwhelming national demand. Congress had not only made the formal declaration but had supported the war loyally and heartily. Congress, in fact, fought the war in almost as real a sense as the army fought it.

Can anybody imagine a renegade soldier going back, after the battle is won, and claiming his place in the army he deserted? Yet that is exactly what Mr. Berger seems to have done in congress.

He might possibly have got away with it in the United States senate—but there is no "senatorial courtesy" in the house.

CALIFORNIA WOMEN FARM

The Mail, of Woodland, Cal., reports that 31 per cent of the students enrolled for agricultural courses offered by the state university are women.

The women of California are showing a keener interest in farming than ever before, and bid fair to take a prominent place in this industry throughout the state.

It is being recognized more generally everywhere that farming is a business well suited to women. As farm machinery becomes more plentiful and practical, many of the worst problems are smoothed away; for women, however plucky, often lack the physical strength for the harder tasks.

Given brains, training and a little initiative, there is no reason why any woman should not farm as successfully as any man, and find it far more pleasant and profitable than many a task considered purely feminine.

CORP. FENNER HOME ON SHORT FURLOUGH

Corporal Allen Fenner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Con Fenner, is spending a short furlough at home on Slate creek. He has been in the motor transport school at Camp Holabird, Maryland, for about 14 months and expects to return in about ten days. "The work there," says Corporal Fenner, "is very interesting, and I will put in a few months more at the school and try for a captain's commission."

"The Camp Holabird motor mechanical school is the largest institution of its kind in the world," says Mr. Fenner, "about 5,000 or 6,000 men being constantly under instruction. The government will make it a permanent school and has on the grounds about 400 trucks, automobiles and artetors. All parts of automobiles are made there, as well as all tools needed around trucks and tractors."

Two years attendance at the school should make a man an efficient mechanic, and when he finishes the schooling the government will present him with a certificate. Men between the ages of 18 and 40 can enlist, for from one to three years. Not only present soldiers, but any man can enlist and may attend the school as long as they wish.

The local recruiting station will receive enlistments for this branch of the service, the government paying railroad fare both ways and $30 per month and all expenses of the students while at the school.

Corporal Fenner states that he will return as an instructor, but for the next few days will be at the local recruiting headquarters where he will be glad to give further information to any man desiring to enter the motor school.

10,000 BIRDS SERVE DURING GREAT WAR

London, May 28.—Demobilization of English war pigeons and men who care for them in France has taken place, with the exception of birds and men selected for the army of occupation. About 10,000 birds that had served their country faithfully were sold in France and Belgium and the proceeds of sale divided among charitable institutions of those countries and England in accordance with the wish of the breeders who had donated the pigeons to the British army.

Many a man owes his life to the rapid flight of a pigeon from a broken down seaplane. In the battle of Messines 1,200 pigeons were used to carry messages, not a single one of which went astray.

CHAUTAUQUA OPENS FINANCIAL SUCCESS

Chautauqua opened Tuesday afternoon with prospect of complete success. The ladies in charge of the event did their work so well that the finances have been arranged and every detail connected with the preliminary work was satisfactorily done, and won praise from the Chautauqua director.

The International Trio which opened the program in the afternoon and gave the prelude to the lecture in the evening, was much enjoyed. The lecture-entertainment by Julius Caesar Nayphe, native of Athens, gave a most illuminating lecture on the customs, manners and life in Palestine. He displayed gorgeous tapestries and gowns of great value, and his lecture was clever.
