Leave Their Tails Behind Them. Most of the reptiles of the Colorado are colored like their surroundings, and are difficult to detect. Others can change their colors to suit their surroundings, while not a few of the desert lizards are able to part with their tails very readily when they are seized. There is humor in the ways of desert tortoises. When one meets another—unless both are males, when a fight inevitably takes place—each nods its head rapidly up and down as though in salutation, and sometimes noses are touched as they pass.

His Fatal Error.
"Poor old feller!" sympathetically said the landlord of the Petunia tavern, as a funeral procession trilled by. "He was our last lingering horse doctor. For years he went around hauling open horses' mouths and wagging his head as if he had discovered something absolutely unheard of in the annals of horse history. Probably he didn't really know much about horses, but he loved to associate with them. After he had outlived his usefulness and almost outlived his horses he would go poking around among the autos and muttering. And day before yesterday, when he found one standing alone and unhitched, he went in front of it and tried to open its mouth, or something; anyhow, it gave a snort and ran over him, and fetched his checked career to an end. Well, Doc was a pretty good sort of a feller, and he didn't owe me but $8 that I remember of."—Kansas City Star.

Beet and Cane Sugar Crops.
Beet and cane sugar combine to make nearly an average production of sugar in this country for the season beginning in 1918. A little over a million short tons, or 1,007,000, is the total of the two crops, according to estimates, subject to revision, made by the bureau of crop estimates. The average of the preceding five years is 1,031,000 tons, or somewhat greater than the production of 1918.

The cane-sugar crop of 1918, however, is estimated to be 269,950 tons, or considerably above the average of the preceding five years, 248,196 tons, while the beet-sugar crop of 740,100 tons is below the five-year average of 788,108 tons.

MAKES RAPID HEADWAY

Add This Fact to Your Store of Knowledge

Kidney disease often advances so rapidly that many a person is firmly in its grasp before aware of its progress. Prompt attention should be given the slightest symptom of kidney disorder. If there is a dull pain in the back, headaches, dizzy spells or a tired, worn-out feeling, or if the kidney secretions are offensive, irregular and attended by pain, procure a good kidney remedy at once.

Your townspeople recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the statement of this Grants Pass citizen: "J. P. Morse, 333 Bridge St., says: 'Doan's Kidney Pills are all right and I don't hesitate to tell anyone I hear complaining of backache or lumbago about them. I have been nearly down and out with these troubles at times, but when I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills, I have soon been relieved. It is a year or more since I have had any trouble from my back or kidneys, but I would know what to do if I should ever have need of a kidney medicine again.'

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Morse had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

HOLLAND HOUSED 10,000 HUN SPIES

Placed There to Keep in Touch With Britain.

USE DUTCHMEN AS COURIERS

Carry Messages to Enemy Agents in England—Loose Passport System Made Things Easy at First—Some of the Spies Were Highly Educated Men, Others Were Mere Shadowers and Touts—Dangerous Band Broken.

There were 10,000 known German agents in Holland during the war. A Dutch police inspector explained to the New York Sun that to expel them would simply mean that their places would be taken by other and unknown agents.

They drifted into Holland on various pretexts. Some were highly educated men, capable of moving in the best society; others were mere shadowers and touts. They took up all sorts of positions. The case of the porter at the Hotel des Indes, the Waldorf-Astoria of The Hague, who proved to be a brother of the then German ambassador at Constantinople, is already known. But that is only one of hundreds of similar incidents.

The chief task of this army of men was of course to keep in touch with Great Britain. In the early days of the war there was no more difficulty in this than if there was no war. British passports in those days were not worth the paper on which they were produced.

A young journalist who was in Holland but had no passport got one from the local Consul (a Dutchman of course) simply on the production of a letter from home. Later on it was rendered very difficult to get a British passport, but curiously enough the previous issues of useless paper were not withdrawn until the war had been in progress for three full years. It need hardly be said that the German secret service made good use of the carelessness.

Lack of Co-operation.
Again the spies benefited from the lack of co-operation between the different British departments. Thus in one large town the British community was unofficially warned against patronizing a certain music dealer, who was a known German agent. Yet that man was one of the few Dutch music dealers who had a license for the import of British music.

Dutchmen were largely used as couriers between the German agents in Holland and the spies in Britain. Loose women and night clubs were employed as a means of ensnaring young men for this purpose.

Another aspect of the activities of these human moles was that of gathering information in Holland. The organization behind them was marvelous. Enormous prices were paid to Dutch telegraphers for copies of censored code wires passing between the legations and Downing street or the Quay d'Orsay. So rampant did this evil become that the Dutch authorities had to insist on each operator submitting a search before going on duty and again afterward.

Photography was used to an extraordinary extent. Passengers boarding the boats for England were snatched and the photos all carefully filed. Photography was chiefly used to ensnare possible victims. On one occasion a French attaché, riding in the woods near Wassenaar, encountered a lady who had been thrown from her horse. With the gallantry of his race, he went to her assistance. A few days later he was confronted with photographs of himself kneeling beside the "injured" lady. He was told that the lady was not injured at all, and would tell her own story.

Dangerous Band Broken Up.
With the threat of exposure as a spy, great effort was made to turn him into a traitor. Fortunately, he acted promptly and with courage, and in consequence a dangerous band was broken up. This was by no means an isolated instance.

One characteristic of Teutonic methods was the adoption of great precautions to get the odium, in the event of discovery, thrown on Britain. On one occasion an "English" yacht, manned by "Englishmen" was found stranded in forbidden waters near the mouth of the Scheidt. The yacht was seized and the crew arrested. On board was found a fairly complete plan of the Dutch mine field protecting the mouth of the Scheidt. The odium was thus thrown on Britain. Happily, a few days later the plot was discovered and the pseudo-Englishmen found to be Teutons from Hamburg.

Finally, an instance may be given of how the practice of spying has been ingrained in the German people. A Dutch family living at Haarlem had a German boy of eleven staying with them in the summer of 1917. They found that the youngster was keeping a note of all that was said in the conversation about Germany. When asked the reason of this, the boy said that he had been instructed to do so by his school-teacher, so that anybody who spoke against the Kaiser could be found out and punished. That from a boy of eleven!
