John W. Hoyt, of Ashland, permanent clerk; and Rev. E. P. Lawrence of Lake Falls as temporary clerk.

The attendance of ministers and elders of the Presbyterian church of Oregon is large and enthusiastic. From out of the bounds of synod are some of the influential men of the denomination. Rev. A. J. Montgomery, D. D., of St. Louis, also Rev. W. R. King, of the same city. Rev. W. E. Finley of New York City; Revs. Warren H. Landon, James H. Speer of San Francisco, Rev. Silas Evans, president of Occidental college of Los Angeles, and Rev. Geo. C. Tracker of New York, all will be heard in lectures during the meetings.

The presence of W. J. Bryan, distinguished Presbyterian elder, and Billy Sunday, Presbyterian minister, during the sessions lend great interest to the meeting.

Approximately $175 have been raised by the soliciting committee appointed to gather funds for the purpose of making improvements at Riverside bathhouse. Tickets are still being sold, as it will be necessary to raise at least $300 to make the contemplated improvements. Sanitary closets will be installed at the east end of the bathhouse and will be accessible to tourists as well as bathhouse patrons.

Tickets are being sold for $1.00 each, and they are good for this year or any year following. Tickets may be secured from Mrs. Meyers, superintendent at the bathhouse, as well as from any of the soliciting committee.

One of the new features to be added will be a float near the edge of the water for children and those who cannot swim, and if enough money is on hand a "slide" will be installed for the youngsters.

DE VALERS TO STIR UP SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, Cal., July 17.—The national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America to open here tomorrow will be unique in the history of this order. Never since the organization was founded more than 50 years ago has a national convention been held west of the Rocky mountains and no other convention has been attended by a provisional president of the "Irish Republic."

Eamonn de Valera, "president of Ireland," telegraphed the arrangements committee he would be here at the opening of the convention. This announcement caused estimates of the number of delegates and visitors to be greatly increased.

Ahead of His Time.

The dream of John Wise to cross the Atlantic in an airship was never realized, and yet that dream has become an actuality almost a half century after this intrepid navigator of the upper air made his last fateful voyage. As far back as 1843 Wise petitioned congress for an appropriation to finance his project looking to cross the ocean in a balloon which he designed for long distance journeys. For eight years he appealed in vain, the reasons given being that his propositions were not practical and that money invested in such a project would be thrown away and the lives of those who made the attempt would be sacrificed to the ambition of a visionary enthusiast. In 1851 Wise again came into the public eye by again asking congress for an appropriation sufficient to build an airship from which explosives could be dropped on an enemy either on land or sea. The same treatment was accorded to the inventor as he had received for his other projects. In 1879 Wise and several companions made an ascension at St. Louis, and were never heard of afterward.

Hoss-Shoes.

The custom of using hosseshoes instead of the large flat, metal rings with which the game of quoits is professionally played was ancient when Joseph Smith wrote his "Sports and Pastimes of the People of England," well over a hundred years ago, and, according to a traveler in modern New England, they are still so used in that part of the world. The traveler tells of seeing two Maine farmers meet early one morning in the road in front of a farmhouse. "I'll play you a game of hoss-shoes," suggested one. "I'll play you just one game," said the other. "I've got a lot of work to do today." So they began playing, and when the traveler passed that way again late in the afternoon they were still at it. They had been playing hosseshoes all day, and the farmer's wife confided to the traveler, not altogether with admiration, that they hadn't stopped even for dinner.
