The dirty deal that Riddle, Myrtle Creek and Glendale were handed by the autocratic highway-men (?) deserves a jolt that will make some of the big three realize that they have got the wrong pig by the ear.—Glendale News.

BOYS, DON'T "MONKEY" WITH THE TRAIL SIGNS

Recently two boys, members of a party of high school students and teachers from Medford visiting the Oregon Caves, in a spirit of fun took up and moved some of the mile stakes along the trail thoughtless of the fact that these stakes were placed by the government forest officers for the benefit of the traveling public.

As a result of the prank the offenders were required to go out and reset the stakes. The matter was settled in this way on account of the youth of the offenders and the lack of malicious intent on their part. The law, however, provides a severe penalty for molesting government property.

Forest Supervisor Macduff states that the practice of mutilating, removing and destroying forest service trail signs, which are made and placed at considerable trouble and expense to the government for the benefit of the traveling public, has become altogether too prevalent and that future offenses of this nature will be summarily dealt with.
