THE IDEAL PLOW FOR IRRIGATED LAND

Especially if you farm irrigated land, there is a big advantage in using our John Deere Two-Way Plow.

After you finish a field with this plow, there are no ridges to smooth down and no dead furrows to fill up.

Starting at one side of the field, you plow back and forth until you reach the other side, throwing the soil all one way.

Besides its advantages for plowing irrigated land, the John Deere Two-Way is the best plow for seedbed making on hillsides or in irregular fields.

Width of furrow is regulated by pressure on a foot lever. Slight pressure on another foot lever raises the bottom from the ground. The clevis shift is automatic. Practically all the operator has to do is to guide the team.

Equipped with genuine John Deere bottoms, the world's standard.

Quick Detachable Shares—loosen one nut to remove the share; tighten the same nut and the share is on tight.

Come in and look over a John Deere Two-Way and our other quality implements
