BOSNIA SUFFERING FROM WAR EFFECTS

Sarajevo, Bosnia, Nov. 12.—Bosnia may be a long time recovering from the effects of the war. Factory production is almost at a standstill, railroad transport is irregular and uncertain, stores are bare of stocks, imports are much reduced, clothing and food are high in price, and there is much idleness among the people. The crops this year, however, are abundant and there is sufficient food to meet all needs. The German and Hungarian signs which formerly appeared above the store windows have given place to placards in Serbian, and Sarajevo has taken on quite the appearance of a Serbian town. The Serbian inhabitants are of course quite content with the Belgrade government, but the Germans, Austrians and Turks are not quite so happy. There is a disposition, however, to accept conditions as they are and to hope for a resumption of the commercial activity and advantages which the people enjoyed at the hands of the Austrians. The friends of the Serbs and Jugo-Slavs hope that with time the Serbian government will be able to match the prosperity and progress which the Austrians and Germans brought to the country.

Among the population America enjoys great prestige and respect. This is largely due to the timely help brought to the country by the American Red Cross and the United States food administration. Until the arrival of these relief agencies, Americans had never before appeared in Bosnia in any considerable number. The presence of the officers of the Red Cross and the food administration has had a splendid moral and the educational effect among the Bosnians. Much of the rancor and harsh feeling engendered by the war has been removed, and through the work of these Americans the larger part of the people now look upon the United States as a friend, not as a foe.

TWO AMERICAN WOMEN SAVE BRITISH GENERAL

Scutari, Albania, Nov. 10.—Two American women were the means of saving a British general and his aide from what appeared to be certain death at the hands of a hostile band of Montenegrins, according to a story told in Albania by the foreign colonies. The women are Miss Ella F. McGovern, of Milwaukee, Wis., and Mrs. Maria Ford, of Indianapolis, Ind., field workers in the service of the American Red Cross. Major General G. P. Phillips, virtually military governor for the British in Albania, and Captain P. T. Farrer, were the officers whose lives were spared by intervention of the women.

The British general and his aide were proceeding north through Albania on a tour of inspection with the Americans, and, without knowing it, had crossed the Montenegrin border. Suddenly, in a section resembling somewhat Yellowstone Park, a band of 68 Montenegrin soldiers stepped out of a thicket and ordered them to halt, levelled rifles at them. Believing he had reached an active fighting zone, the general directed his chauffeur to turn around. But the Montenegrins refused to allow the car to go. The leader of the band ordered the party to walk single file to a point where they were in full view of every one of the Montenegrins, who lowered their guns and loaded them.

The American women knew that a price had been set by the Montenegrins on General Phillips' head for what the Montenegrins conceived to be unfriendly acts on his part in Albania toward certain of their tribes, and had forbidden him to enter their country. They sensed the seriousness of the situation at once, and after identifying themselves as representatives of the American Red Cross, they insisted the English general and his aide also were Americans. "Keep quiet and don't say a word," Miss McGovern admonished the Englishmen.

The leader of the Montenegrins was skeptical of the nationality of the party, and sent for his chief, who although unable to read the identification papers which the Americans handed him, did make out the word "American" and the red cross.

The whole attitude of the Montenegrins changed when they became convinced the party were Americans. Cigarettes were exchanged between the Montenegrins and the two grateful British officers, and the party were allowed to proceed.

The Greatest Mother Turns to Tasks of Peace.

THE THREE CROSSES

The iron cross is black as death and hard as human hate;

The wooden cross is white and still and whispers us, "Too Late."

But the Red Cross sings of life and love and hearts regenerate.

The iron cross is a boastful cross and marks the war-mad slave;

The wooden cross is a dumb, dead cross and marks a shallow grave.

But the Red Cross reaches out its arms to solace and to save.

The iron cross is a knaiser's cross and narrow is its clan;

The wooden cross is a soldier's cross and mourns its partisan.

But the Red Cross is the Cross of One who served his fellowman.

—Edmond Vance Cooke.
