"It's the Climate"

A new stunt was pulled by the local high school football team yesterday when the Lebanon team showed lack of sportsmanship and failed to show up to finish the game. After cheering for the men from the north, another cheer was given with a final "It's the Climate."

An appeal to those who love Photoplays — and to those who don't.

Believe in the whole-hearted sincerity of this appeal. Forget the unearned adjectives used to exploit other photo plays. For get the "big" productions that proved so small. Have faith in this resounding statement.

Is the most inspiring and profoundly heart-stirring production since the birth of the photoplay. It makes your emotions surge like a tide within you. We challenge you to see this drama blazing itself into your heart with dry eyes. We challenge you to see the terrific climax and remain unmoved.

Automobile Traced to Klamath—

There are no new developments in the investigation of the White jitney holdup case, Mr. White not having returned from Medford and Klamath Falls. The automobile, which was transformed into a bug in which shape it was identified by Mr. White as the car taken from him, was traced to Klamath Falls, then back to the Applegate valley, and later it was traced into the ownership of the Medford garage people, who had obtained it from the Applegate valley resident. It is probable from the record of the transactions that the holdup may have taken it to Klamath Falls for disposal, and that it later found its way back to this district in legitimate transactions.
