The Shelter of Life.
You have conquered one whole, happy day. Contemplate without regret the sleep that marks its end, for you will continue to live this day during all the rest of your life. And if this day was truly beautiful do you not know that others after you will continue to live it, down through the succession of the years? It is true that each moment dispossesses us even of the object we never withdraw our arms from, but each moment restores to us transfused all the treasures it has snatched away from us.—George Duhamel.

Reader's Scrapbook.

Novelists as well as journalists know the value of the newspaper cutting, but few, perhaps, "collect" so assiduously as did Charles Reade. Several hours each morning were devoted by Reade to cutting out interesting items—police reports and statistics of all kinds—which he pasted into huge scrap books and carefully indexed. To these scrap books he turned for the illustrative materials, and sometimes the inspiration of his stories, and it was due to such methods that he could write perhaps the best description of an Australian sunrise ever penned, though he had never set foot in the southern continent.

NATION'S FORESTS BEING DEPLETED

Great Eastern Centers of Production Near Exhaustion.

U. S. FORESTER URGES ACTION

High Prices of Lumber Not Wholly Due to Increased Costs of Production—Mills of the South Have Not More Than 10 to 15 Years' Supply of Virgin Lumber—Enlarged Program of Public Acquisition of Forests Urged.

The rate of depletion of the forests of this country is more than twice, probably three times, what is actually being produced by growth in a form serviceable for products other than firewood. Consequently, high prices of lumber are not wholly due to increased costs of production. An important factor is the ever-retreating sources of timber supply. Already the supplies of all the great eastern centers of production are approaching exhaustion, with the exception of the South, and even there most of the mills have not over 10 to 15 years' supply of virgin timber. Already the southern pine is being withdrawn from many points as a competitive factor and its place taken by western timbers. This inevitably results in added freight charges, which the consumer must pay.

Want Enlarged Program.

These facts are called to public attention in the annual report of the forester of the United States department of agriculture, recently published. Their presentation is accompanied by a plea that the nation adopt an enlarged program of public acquisition of forests by the government, the states and municipalities, and protection and perpetuation of forest growths on all privately owned lands which may not better be used for agriculture and settlement.

In the early years of the present century it looked as though the management of forests as permanent, productive properties might be voluntarily undertaken by private owners on a large scale, but since then the situation has materially changed. The need for the adoption of an enlarged program of acquisition, the United States department of agriculture points out, has become increasingly urgent.

Must Join Hands.

More than 20 years ago the division of forestry, as it was then called, offered to give advice and assistance to private timber owners who might wish to consider applying forest management to their properties. By the middle of 1905 requests had been received for the examination of private holdings, large and small, comprising in all 10,900,000 acres of land. Many of these requests were from large lumber companies and other owners of extensive timber tracts. On the strength of the showing made by the preliminary examinations, a number of these large owners entered into co-operative agreements for the preparation of working plans.

But private forest interests failed to follow up the beginning, and the government and the states, in the opinion of the department of agriculture, must join hands to work out a program that will correlate public and private efforts looking to the protection and proper administration of forests. The function of the federal government, in addition to handling the national forests, it is suggested, would be to stimulate, guide and co-ordinate state action and conduct necessary investigations regarding the best methods of forestry, to assist the states in the classification of land, and to harmonize action between the different states. The states would also handle public property owned by them and they would have a further direct responsibility in connection with the protection and perpetuation of private forest lands.

SUN'S RAYS AS WAR WEAPON

Airplanes, "Roosting" High, May Work Terrible Havoc.

Airplanes, "roosting" 15,000 to 20,000 feet in the air, will, through the use of powerful lenses, destroy ammunition dumps and entire cities 75 to 100 miles away without firing a shot or dropping a bomb, declared Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher of Columbus, O., America's ace of aces in the war with Germany, while before the house committee on accounts in Washington.

Captain Rickenbacher noted that by the use of the lenses it will be possible to set fire to the object which the aviator wishes to destroy, just as it is possible to set fire to paper or wood under the magnifying glass held in the rays of the sun.

"Future wars will be won or lost in the air," Captain Rickenbacher observed. "That is true because just such devices as I have mentioned will be brought into play."

Nine U. S. Aces Still in Service.
Nine of the 60 "aces" developed by the United States air service in the world war still are connected with the army, according to an official report.
