THE GRANTS PASS SCHOOL

Commencement week, when the class of young men and women who have been pursuing their studies at the local high school, complete their work, is of more than usual interest as marking a definite point in the life of the young people. For many of them it means the closing of study in the class room. For others, it is stepping from the high school into college or university. In either case, it means probably that ties of home will be soon severed, and that new responsibilities are to be taken upon the shoulders of the rising generation.

The Grants Pass public school system has long had the reputation, earned by a high grade of work under its most competent corps of instructors, of giving to its students all that there can be given in a public school course of instruction. Much depends upon the individual student in school work just as much depends upon the individual citizen in life no amount of direction and guidance work. If it is not in the individual, can bring it out. But for the boy or girl who seeks, that which was sought has been found in the Grants Pass school. From its training, students have gone into the colleges and universities and have become leaders. They had the foundation upon which to build and the ambition for building. And where graduation at Grants Pass has completed school work, they have gone about the serious things of life equipped well for the competition that was before them. The public school organization is one of the things in which Grants Pass takes just pride.
