

CHAMBER TO RAISE FUNDS TO ADVERTISE

United support of the state-wide movement of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce to raise an adequate budget to carry on its program of development work is urged by the board of directors of the state chamber.

A letter signed by Charles Hall and addressed to "the people of the State of Oregon" reads as follows:

"Backed by a record of accomplishments appreciated by those familiar with this work, the board of directors of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce has undertaken a campaign for an expansion in income and members in order that it may meet constantly increasing demands for service and assume larger responsibilities in advancing the commercial, industrial and agricultural interests of Oregon and development of natural resources.

"We are confident of full success and we are sure that the business and professional men, retail merchants, manufacturers and growers throughout the state will make the State Chamber of Commerce a greater institution, assuming wider responsibilities and improvement along many lines.

"We ask the united support of those who want to see Oregon get its full share of material prosperity and are willing to assist in providing for its welfare in the years to come."

Every section of Oregon is represented on the state chamber's board of directors, which is composed of the following men: Charles Hall, Marshfield, president; Emory Olmstead, Portland, vice president; F. S. Bramwell, Grants Pass, vice president; J. T. Rorick, The Dalles, vice president; J. L. Etheridge, Portland, treasurer; G. H. Barlow, Warrenton; J. R. Blackaby, Ontario; E. E. Brodie, Oregon City; C. C. Chapman, Portland; W. W. Harrah, Pendleton; H. Hirschberg, Independence; George H. McMorran, Eugene; T. A. McCann, Bend; Vincent Palmer, La Grande; William Pollman, Baker; and George Quayle, Portland, secretary.

Charles Bancroft, of Crescent City, was given a hearing yesterday before Judge Holman and was bound over to the grand jury on $500 bail. Bancroft was charged with a statutory crime, a Crescent City girl being implicated with him. He paid his bail and went back to Crescent City, where he will await the September term of court. Bancroft has a wife and two children in the coast city.

Spraying Is Urged—

Due to the cold weather, the codling moth is not emerging as early as usual, according to County Agent Miller. They should be looked after now and all fruit should be covered with spray not later than June 10. A second application should follow in two or three weeks. The county agent urges that growers spray thoroughly for the first brood in order to minimize the danger that comes later in the season. Blight is also beginning to appear in some sections, according to Mr. Miller. This should be looked after at once. It is said to be due in all probability, to the severe winter.

To Advertise Grants Pass—

A novel idea for advertising the cities of the state and their chief claim to fame is being started in Portland. The Chamber of Commerce there is having a series of charades and in each the main asset of a town is advertised and the people are to guess where it is. Medford's horticultural facilities were the latest to receive the attention of the sister city in the north. The next will be a charade advertising the caves. Pictures and pamphlets will be distributed among the members present. To the question "What does it?" the reply "It's the Climate," is supposed to be forthcoming. The folders have been sent and the matter of getting the pictures printed is being considered.

HUNS FAIL TO STAMP TURK WITH CULTURE

Constantinople, June 5.—The Germans have failed in their effort to stamp their culture upon the Turk and, instead, the English language is beginning to rank next to French in the commercial life of the Levant.

In the war period German language schools were opened throughout Constantinople in which German officers were required to teach and German papers were circulated by all possible means. But the results were almost nil. Most of the schools were free and failed to attract better classes, and French was too strongly entrenched as the language of trade and social intercourse to be displaced.

Since the armistice, Italians have been working industriously to popularize their language and literature. Italian officers are now teaching in schools as the Germans did. But their schools are well attended only in the poorer parts of the city.

Turkish is but little used in important commercial transactions in Constantinople as nearly all business men of whatever nationality speak French, the English who have been in business in Turkey for years generally transact their business in French.

Since the war, however, there has been a great influx of American traders who know only English and the steady stream of American ships coming to Constantinople with English-speaking crews, as well as American Red Cross workers and American and English relief workers of various sorts, has created a greater demand for the English language. For years the English have maintained a boys' high school and girls' high school in Constantinople. Robert college and the Constantinople college for women, both American institutions have done much to advance English as a medium for higher education. And now the Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association are offering a variety of day and night classes for persons desiring to acquire English.

First Bolshevik Republic

A writer in a French newspaper has discovered that a bolshevik republic existed in China seventy years ago, at Chetung, in Manchuria. It was founded by conscript miners who had been sent by the Chinese Emperor to dig for gold. These men, treated as slaves, deserted and established a Communist republic in the mountains. Their example was followed by an entirely different class, a race of brigands, who, however, continued to "spoil the Egyptians" while leaving their Communist neighbors unmolested. Their menfolk are now polling Manchuria on behalf of Japan, which adopted the plan of settling thieves to catch thieves, and in return for their services protected them from Chinese and Russian persecutors.

The Parent's Assistant.

The son of Mr. Newly-Rich wanted to be an auctioneer. His father had intended him for a learned profession, but promised to think it over. Meeting a friend Mr. Risen-from-the-Ranks, he confided to him the dilemma, and asked for his view of auctioneering as a calling. "Well," said this authority on short cuts to wealth, "it's like this: An auctioneer order 'ave an 'ammer and an 'ead, an' the 'ammer ain't a hantom o' use without the 'ead."

Pity Wasted.

"I was sorry for Mrs. Brown when she was taken with that coughing fit in church this morning," Jones remarked kindly. "Everyone in the place was looking at her."

"Don't you worry about her feelings," Mrs. Jones observed tartly. "I guess she didn't mind everyone looking at her, as she had on a new $50 hat."

Peculiar Streams.

Many of the streams and lakes of eastern Oregon are strongly alkaline in character. The Rio de Vinagre—the Vinegar river—of New Granada, in Central America, is sour from the sulphuric acid in the water. The Orange river in South Africa contains matter which renders it poisonous to fishes in part of its course. In Algeria there is a stream inkly black, and indeed it is only diluted ink, owing to one of its tributaries being strongly impregnated with the iron which it absorbs from a ferruginous soil, and the other from meandering through a peat marsh, being equally rich in gallic acid, the two principal ingredients of ink.

The church was beautifully decorated with apple blossoms and ferns. Prof. T. Perry Haller, presided at the pipe organ, playing the wedding march of "Lohengrin" at the approach of the wedding party, and during the ceremony the "Love Song" by Hewett. The newlyweds left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. An elaborate breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father. Later they were entertained at dinner at Eugene at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert.

After a two weeks wedding trip to Los Angeles and other California points Mr. and Mrs. Howard on their return will be at home to their friends at 466 12th street, Astoria. The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school, of Portland, and the University of Oregon and a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority.
