Praised and Eaten.

As a help I entertained my new "in-laws" at dinner. In trying to turn my heavy rolled roast in the pan on the oven door the pan slipped and the roast rolled all over the kitchen floor before I could grab it. I hastily washed it, buttered it, and got it into the oven again, then got down on the floor to scrub up the grease. As I was scrubbing, I walked my mother-in-law, whose cries at seeing me scrubbing in my silk dress while preparing dinner brought the rest of the company. I stood the teasing until after the roast had been duly eaten and praised, and then confessed.—Exchange.

CURRENCY DEFLATION TOPIC FOR BANKERS

Tahoe, Cal., June 11.—The problem of deflation of the currency is the most pressing of those confronting banking interests, delegates to the California Bankers' Association convention here were told yesterday by George S. Meredith of Oakland, president of the convention.

"A year ago a spirit of optimism was abroad in the land, new enterprises were planned on every hand, and a spell of hopeful confidence pervaded the country," he said. "And for a time our bright hopes seemed to be realized, crops were good, and Nature blessed the West richly. A year ago deflation of our currency and credits was not often discussed. Today it is the dominant topic. As we review the situation today we see that inflation was inevitable from the moment the United States ceased to be a debtor nation and became a creditor nation."

Federal reserve banks long ago could have "applied the brakes" to the inflation movement by raising the discount rate, said Meredith.

"I am not one to condemn the federal reserve bank for allowing expansion to reach the peak," he continued, "rather, it would seem to be its duty to finance the government even though the government were conducted on an extravagant and profligate scale. Now must come the period of foreign readjustment. This meets an added obstruction in the condition of foreign exchange. A condition so bad that a debt of 1000 marks, formerly equal to about $240, could recently be settled for $10."

Referring to international policy Meredith said:

"The time has come for this nation to declare its dissociation with European affairs in all that does not concern us in respect of our political safety and industrial welfare. Utopian notions of brotherly responsibility, pledged in formal compacts, have no proper place in this nation's permanent policy."

A grave danger which threatens the business life of America, Meredith said, is the prevailing system of taxation, "which eliminates the resources of the investor upon whom our enterprises have been dependent in the past."
