WARREN G. HARDING—A MAN WHO CAN WIN

To say that the majority of republicans were pleased when it was announced that the convention had nominated Harding would not be the truth, and yet that fact is through no fault of Harding or what he stands for.
The first impression felt by every republican who had taken an active interest in the nomination was a selfish bit of chagrin that the candidate he had supported had not been named, not thereby vindicating his personal foresight and analytic ability to pick the winner.

After the first impression came the question, "Is Harding a really progressive man, who can unite the party on fundamental republican principles, and avert the shoals of extreme views in either direction?"
This question is best answered by reading the story of Harding's career. It is a story we Americans are proud to have back of our next president, for by the choice of Warren G. Harding, the republican party successfully passed the only obstacle in its drive to a November victory.

In reviewing that record you will find that the circumstances and environment of Warren Harding's boyhood and manhood have been those of many hundreds of American youths. You can point out men on the streets of Grants Pass whose lives are typified by the life of the next American executive. There is nothing in that life savoring of royalty; there is nothing in the public career savoring of royalty; and there is no reason to believe that in his career as president there will be anything bordering on royalty, the bended knee to royalty, or a crown prince in the royal cortege. Harding's American ancestry is such that nothing but an exemplification of the most red-blooded type of Americanism and Yankee democracy can be looked for; true democracy is safe in the hands of a man who was reared on a farm, who worked his way through college, who started in business as editor and publisher of a weekly country paper, and who later having developed that same paper from a weekly to a city daily, has found time to interest himself in the study and conduct of American government to the point where he is considered an expert on it. It has been a life of typical Americanism, so basically American, in fact, that our great typical American of all Americans, Theodore Roosevelt, campaigned for Harding in one of his more recent political battles.

If there is yet a doubt, after reviewing that record, the words of Calvin Coolidge, the progressive and efficient governor of Massachusetts, in expressing his delight at being on the same ticket with Harding should dispel that hesitation.

There is nothing in the private or public life of Warren G. Harding that can give offense to the radically progressive element of the republican party; there is nothing but admiration from the great middle mass of forward looking republicans; and there is nothing to it but acquiescence from what is left of the old ultra-conservative gang of stand-paters, because they could never elect a man anyway. So beyond this, where there is opposition to the typically American figure of Warren G. Harding, we must conclude "They are democrats, and none are so blind as they who will not see."

NOTHING TO IT AS A PIE

With Lemon Filling Gone, Remainder of Confection Could Only Be Classed as "Squash."

A business man of Jeffersonville, active in the councils of the Young Business Men's club and of the Rotary club and one of whose outstanding characteristics is a liking for pie, says he has learned a perfectly good way of making squash pie out of lemon pie, but prefers the latter kind, says the Indianapolis Star. He had been to a sale in Utica township, not to buy, but attracted by the fame of the cooks who were to serve pie. He surrounded one lemon pie and asked to have another packed to take home—for his wife, he said. The women packed it between two paper dishes, the upper one inverted, and then wrapped it in newspaper. He placed it on the back seat of his automobile and started for home. Unfortunately he gave a friend the package for a cushion. When the package was turned over to the lady of the house and was opened by her it consisted of an upper paper dish, an upper pie crust, a lower pie crust and a lower paper dish; that was all. It was a clear case of "squash," and not a sign of lemon filling left.

MINISTERS TRY TO CREATE FRIENDSHIP

New York, June 14.—Cultivation of international friendship for the United States will be the purpose of a delegation of 40 ministers who have been appointed to visit 19 European countries this summer as representatives of the federal council of churches of Christ in America.

The ministers are of several denominations and include the pastors of churches all over the country. In explaining the purpose of the federal council's "friendly visitors," the Rev. Arthur J. Brown, secretary of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, New York and chairman of the committee on fraternal relations of the commission on relations with religious bodies in Europe, said:

"We feel that such an association of our religious bodies would materially contribute to the success of the league of nations. We deeply regret that up to this time our own nation has not officially entered into the league. We believe that a large majority of the American people and especially of the clergy and laity of our churches, are in favor of the league and earnestly hope that the United States will soon become a member of it. Meantime, we feel that Christian men should make all the stronger effort to develop those moral and spiritual associations between the nations, which are, after all, the things of highest importance."

He said that the sending of these messengers of American friendliness and the extensive relief work promoted by American churches are part of the same expression of their common Christianity in its international application.

Rev. Nehemiah Boynton of Brooklyn, has been chosen chairman of the American delegation to the preliminary conference at Geneva, where a plan will be perfected for holding the Ecumenical conference.

Traveling With the Turkeys.

Processions of all kinds are to be found in the streets of Stamboul and with no traffic regulations it is difficult to make much headway. In "The Daily Pageant of Stamboul" in Travel Miss Lucy Garnett finds herself in mixed society. "In company with a large drove of turkeys, we take our way along the broad straight street, lined on either hand with shops. Presently the turkeys get into difficulties with a file of hannels bearing on their Atlaslike shoulders piles of bedding and curiously decorated chests and coffers. * * * These bales and chests constitute the wedding trousseaus and 'plenshing' of a Turkish bride." The turkeys are soon remounted to be dispersed many times before they are finally landed safely near the great mosque where they are to be sold in celebration of a Moslem festival.

Sustenance in the Mesquit.

The mesquit yields excellent food for both man and beast. One authority says that the bean, of which husk and all are used, contains over 50 per cent of practicable food elements. The Indians nowadays do not call on it to the extent they did formerly, when the meal ground from the beans of this plant was the staple of their diet, though they still use it freely; but horses, and the omnivorous burros and the desert cattle rejoice at sight of a bean-hung mesquit. Many times, during expeditions that took us far out of range of ordinary fodder, the situation has been saved for our animals by our finding a mesquit or two, the twigs pendant with plump clusters and the ground whitened with the fallen fruit.—J. Smeaton Chase.

"THE SILVER HORDE" IS MASTERLY DRAMA

Those who know the northwest, the Puget Sound country and the southern Alaska route will find immense pleasure in "The Silver Horde," which, in addition to being a Rex Beach production and a mighty good motion picture, has the satisfying joy of realism experienced by all true westerners. "The Silver Horde" opened a three day engagement at the Oregon theater yesterday matinee.

Rex Beach and his company passed through Portland last summer, bound for Seattle, where a goodly share of the scenes were taken. Views of the Colman docks, where the Alaskan steamers and fishing boats leave Seattle. The romance, the adventure and the fascination of the northwest, with its traditions of raft play and manly strength in contrast to the conservative, ancestral-loving standards of the Atlantic coast have been caught by the camera man as successfully as when first conceived by the novelist.

Visualization of such scenes as the actual coming of the salmon run, which is "the silver horde" of the Alaskan glaciers coming down the channel, of mile on mile of virgin timber and of fighting brains and bodies can not fail to grip and hold the attention not only of ardent motion picture fans and Rex Beach devotees, but of all interested in human activities of an adventurous virile nature.

INDIANS GATHER ON ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE

Missoula, Mont., June 14.—The level land lying at the end of the Bitter Root valley, south of this city, is at present thickly populated by the tepees of the Flathead Indians who have just made their annual pilgrimage here from the Flathead reservation in search of their staple, the bitter root.

According to the belief of the Indians, the bitter root must be gathered when the flower reaches a certain stage of development, and at this time the squaws carefully separate the different colored shades of pink, each shade representing a cure from some ailment or other. The bitter root is found in the vicinity of Missoula more than anywhere else in the state, it is said, and it survives year after year, despite the annual assaults of the red man against it. One decided novelty marks the presence of the Indian encampment this year. Where, in the past, the bucks have never been known to do anything more than to sit in the shade of the tepee and boss the job, solemnly smoking their pipes the while, this year some considerable number of them may be noted, at various times, engaging in the "setting up" exercises which they learned as a part of their great adventures as soldiers of Uncle Sam.
