Resourceful, and Won.

A young man from our town had gone into a training school as an automobile mechanic. In one of their tests an automobile was taken apart and it was his duty to assemble each part to its respective place. He had done this with the exception of one piece, which was missing, and which he could not find. C., commanding officer, told this young fellow that it was up to him to get this piece, so, taking his superior officer at his word, he proceeded to take the missing part from the commanding officer's own car, and he was one of four out of a class of 100 who passed the test.—H. USE LANGUAGE OF SHAKESPEARE

Mountaineers Talk as in Queen Elizabeth's Time.

NEAR JOHN FOX'S HOME

Teacher in Kentucky School Tells of Interesting Life in Wilds—Englishman Finds Verses of Old Ballad That Had Been Brought to Years—Games Long Forgotten in England Played by Mountain Folk.

Opening a school in a region where still prevail the language of Shakespeare, the games and ballads of Queen Elizabeth's era and the simple hospitality of the day of Robin Hood, is the work of Miss Katherine Pettit, one of the heads of the Pine Mountain Settlement School of Harlan county, Kentucky.

As one of the organizers of the school twenty years ago, Miss Pettit occupies the position of close friend to scores of the mountain people, who are being acclimated by writers as one of the most interesting developments of American life. The school is "just across the mountain" from the home of the late John Fox, Jr., and the author of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" was a frequent visitor to the old log house and the house in the woods where classes are held.

A visitor to the settlement was Cecil Sharp of Oxford university, considered the world's greatest authority on English folklore. He had been told of the Kentucky mountain region by an American student and journeyed all the way from England in the hope of finding a "ballad or two to add to his collection."

He remained two years and gathered enough material to publish a new volume, which is dedicated to the Pine Mountain school. His delight in finding the store of old English customs almost in their original form several thousand miles away from the old country is expressed in the introduction to the work.

Old Folklore Picked Up.

One day the English expert had packed his belongings and was on his way across the mountains to the nearest town where he might take a train, satisfied that he had culled the rich store of material to his last fragment. As he tramped along he overtook an aged woman driving her cow home for the evening, singing to herself as she wended her way down the path. The ear of the Oxford man caught a familiar strain. He hurried down the path, dragging out a notebook and pencil as he ran.

"How many of those verses do you know?" he asked.

"Eighteen," was the reply. Down they sat on the roadside, while Mr. Sharp took down the words and music of a ballad for which English collectors had been searching many years. They had hoped somewhere to find four verses, which they believed composed the story of "Edward," with the refrain of "Edward, How Came That Blood on Your Shirtsleeve?" The eighteen verses the old mountain woman sang off with faithful accuracy made a find at which historical groups rejoiced all over the world. The Englishman remained three months more and collected almost enough to fill another volume from the memory of the aged woman.

Gives England New Dance.

The "Running Set," found by Sharp at Pine Mountain school, is being danced today all over England, where the ancient forms are being revived in schools. It is not considered a dance in the Appalachians, where dancing is regarded with a somewhat Puritan distrust. It is a "play," and when the young folk gather to enjoy themselves they go to "a play" and not to "a hop." The institution is described as seen for the first time after dark one evening on the porch of one of the larger school buildings with only one dim lantern to light up the scene.

"The moon streamed fitfully in, lighting up the mountain peaks in the background and casting its mysterious light over the proceedings and seeming to exaggerate the wildness and the breakneck speed of the dancers as they whirled through the mazes of the dance," Mr. Sharp writes. "There was no music, only the stamping and clapping of the onlookers. The air seemed literally to pulsate with the rhythm of patters and the tramp of dancers' feet, while over it all floated the even, falsetto tones of the 'caller,' calmly and unexcitedly reciting his directions."

Harlan county is the seat of numerous feuds of long standing—for centuries it has lived in a state of miniature warfare, kept alive by the vigorous sense of honor and family pride that exists among the mountaineers. At the beginning of the war the Pine Mountain school called upon some of the expert knitters of the district to make garments for French soldiers. As she handled the soft wool, one woman remarked regretfully:

"What a pure waste to use this nice yarn for shot-up men!"

Shooting Up Isn't Uncommon.

"But it is for the soldiers, the brave Frenchmen who are risking their lives for their country. Nothing is too good for them, is there?" asked one of the teachers. The mountain woman smiled indulgently.

"When you've been here long as we have you won't get so upset by shot-up men," she replied.

The coming of the war to America brought a flock of eager recruits from the mountains. Few of them had been beyond their own valleys, but if there was fighting to do they were ready. Afterward they came home, thankful for the familiar scenes again.

"We ain't changed," a mountain soldier assured the community when they returned. "We don't even smoke cigarettes. All us boys got together over there and made up our minds it would be a bad benefit for us to smoke 'em, and we didn't want to do nothing of bad benefit that fur from home."

The hospitality of the region is a quality at which the outside world can only marvel. Aunt Judy, a champion spinner and weaver of Pine Mountain, with her two big sons, parted with acres of timber land at a charge of $1 a tree for the most valuable woods in the state. Her boys journeyed across the mountains and brought back $17,000 in saddle bags after they had waited several days for the bank to collect the sum in cash. Years later the money still reposed, virtually untouched, in the bags under the old lady's bed. They had no use for it. "I'd be a sorry mother if I couldn't spin enough to keep my boys in clothes and raise enough to feed us," she said simply.

RECEIVED $10,000 FOR STOCKS WORTH MILLIONS

What is probably the most amazing chapter in the involved story of "Nicky" Arnstein's $5,000,000 bond theft plot was made public in the testimony of young Joseph Gluck (left) former Wall street messenger, who is now in the Toms under $50,000 bail on a charge of being implicated in the stealing of over $1,000,000 worth of securities. Irving Gluck, the brother of Joseph, who is implicated in the plot, is at the right of the photograph. While Joseph apparently let few opportunities slip to gather in securities that were easily negotiable, Irving who is also in the Toms, seemed to be even more active and kept an eagle eye on the caliber of stocks that were being carried about by other runners. In Joseph's confession other brokers are implicated.

UNCOVERED WAR FRAUDS

Investigation Showed Illegal Transactions Involving Millions.

Large sums will be saved for the government through civil and criminal prosecutions now completed or under way, announced Attorney General Palmer in a statement in which he declared a department of justice investigation of alleged fraudulent war contracts had "uncovered illegal transactions involving millions of dollars."

In one class of contracts alone, questionable vouchers unearthed have resulted in the withdrawal of payments by the government amounting to approximately $4,420,000, the statement declared. Special investigations have been ordered into 15 large fraud cases which the bureau of investigation has before it.

LONDON STOPS BIG BUILDING

Action Taken So That Building Trades Might Concentrate on Residences.

The action of the city council of London, England, in stopping all building, except residences, under powers granted by the health ministry, to overcome the housing shortage, has caused a crisis in the London building trades.

Not more than 40 per cent of the men displaced by this shortage can be used in house building, leading business men declare.
