Re-establishing Their Right of Way

The British citizen always has been most jealous of the maintenance of his ancient rights of way. In order to re-establish their right of way through a bridal path leading to Hanworth park, the residents of Feltham, Middlesex, marched through, demolishing a wall en route. The path had been closed for a government aerodrome.

Few Insurmountable Obstacles.

Obstacles seemingly permanently insurmountable bar our progress in some directions, but in any direction we may reasonably hope and attempt to go we shall find that, as a rule, they are either not insurmountable or else not permanent. The strong willed, intelligent, persistent man will find or make a way where, in the nature of things, a way can be found or made. While it is true that the will power cannot perform miracles, yet that it is almost omnipotent and can perform wonders all history goes to prove.—Orison Swett Marden, in Chicago Daily News.

Six-Inch Hawser Only 2 Inches.

When you read that a vessel is moored to her pier by a six-inch or an eight-inch hawser you must not think that the hawser is six or eight inches in diameter. Such a size would make a hefty rope, too heavy for handling, the New York Sun explains. Hawsers, unlike other ropes or cables, are measured according to their circumferences, not according to their diameters. Therefore, a six-inch hawser means one that is six inches around, not six inches in diameter, since the circumference of a circle is to its diameter as three and one-seventh is to one.

UNITED GENIUS AND BEAUTY

Many of America's Great Men Have Proved That the Two Can Exist Together.

While Socrates had the mind of a god and the form of a satyr, and many from that day on have said that beauty and genius do not go together, such is not the case in American history, according to Charles E. Corwin, writing in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. With few striking exceptions good looking, well proportioned men have achieved fame. Washington was a handsome man, and Gen. Winfield Scott was considered fine looking. Gen. Lee, of Civil war fame, was attractive in form and feature. Daniel Webster, Edward Everett, Horace Greeley and Franklin were handsome types of their periods.

The writer declares there has been a distinct change in the type of the American countenance. In colonial days the typical face was full, rosy and reposeful. Today the average countenance is somewhat sharp, pallid and expressive of energy. Roosevelt had the sharpness of present-day features. President Wilson's chin radiates determination, and Bryan's smile is unique of its kind, but the features are like the present day type.

Among men of letters James Fenimore Cooper bore the palm for beauty. He was large and finely proportioned. His features were of leonine cast, and his clear, gray eyes were radiant with power. Washington Irving was a handsome man, as was also N. P. Willis.

NEW LINES SEEN ON MOON

British Astronomer Makes Public Recent Observations of Great Interest to Scientists.

A paper by T. L. MacDonald, read before the British Astronomical association, discusses the appearance of a bright border along the dark limb of the young moon. According to Mr. MacDonald this luminosity, which is not visible in all lunations, has a more or less linelike appearance, and is decidedly brighter than the ordinary earthshine, which always illuminates the darker part of the young moon. The bright border varies in length, not always extending as far as the horns of the lunar crescent, and certain nearly circular swellings of intensified brightness have been noted. In general the border is most sharply defined when the moon is 2½ days old, and it begins to become diffuse the third day of the lunation. By the seventh day it is barely distinguishable. Commenting on these observations, Mr. Harold Thomson stated that he had observed the bright border with the naked eye, but it disappeared in the telescope.—Scientific American.

To Break Him of the Habit.

"John," said her husband's wife, "I don't believe you have smoked one of those lovely cigars I gave you at Christmas."

"No, my dear, I haven't," replied his wife's husband. "As a matter of fact, I intend to keep them until our little Willie grows up and wants to learn to smoke."
