Attended National Convention— Miss Gladys Swacker arrived last night from Stanford and expects to spend her summer vacation in Southern Oregon. Miss Swacker had the privilege of attending all the sessions of the democratic national convention in San Francisco, being one of the 15 Stanford women selected as ushers for the convention. The duties were light, giving much time for the study of democratic politics at close range.

More Gasoline Arrives— The gasoline shortage has no scares for the local automobile dealers. A short time ago the Grants Pass Automotive Association was formed and as a result a carload of 6500 gallons of gasoline was brought in for the association from Richfield, Cal. This carload tided the situation over the danger point and lasted until another carload was received. The car which holds 6500 gallons, is being unloaded under the direction of Rex Barnett, of the C. L. Hobart Company.

Roof Burned Off— The roof was burned off the house at 608 South Eighth street last night, although the fire department made a quick run. The house, which is owned by George Lewis and is occupied by Sam Heglar, caught fire from a spark from the flue and the truck made a hurry-up call. When the hose was connected, the great pressure caused the couplings to come apart and caused some delay. The pressure was 220 pounds.

RETAIN OLD RELIGIOUS RITE

Quapaw Indians Stick to Form of Worship of Which Feast Forms an Important Part.

In the vicinity of Devil's Hollow, several miles east of Quapaw, Okla., there is a wigwam-shaped church building located miles from any white man's habitation, and a long distance from the nearest Indian domicile, where the Quapaw full-blooded Indians congregate regularly to worship the Great Spirit in silence. They sit about a tiny fire that has been built on a stone base in the middle of the dirt floor, from Saturday night at sundown till Sunday noon, fasting and praying, but never speaking a word.

A feature of their church meetings is the feast that follows the fast and religious rites. The meal is served in a little mess house nearby, and when the services are over the souaws, who have slipped out a few hours before the time to close, are ready with the dinner and all sit down to partake of the food that is always a part of the program.

The church was built many years ago, so that the residents might have a place to worship, a custom still kept up, regardless of the fact that there is no preacher, no choir, nothing to call them but the religious spirit of the Indian. Chief Quapaw owns nearly 1,000 acres of land in this region, but when he was offered $20,000 for a few acres of it that lay in the city of Quapaw, which was named after him, he refused because, he said, he knew the white man would try to get the money, but could not get the land away from him.

DRAWS MUSIC FROM A SAW

New Yorker Gets Startling and Pleasing Effects by Using the Tool as a Violin.

The conventional saw has recently appeared in a new role—namely, as a musical instrument. Indeed, one of the leading novelties of a current New York musical revue is the musical carpenter who uses his saw as a violin. After protracted experimentation and untiring practice, Sam Moore of New York city has succeeded in getting very agreeable music from ordinary carpenter's saw, according to the Scientific American. He holds the saw handle between his legs, holds the tip of the saw in one hand and works the usual violin bow with the other. The vibrating steel blade emits soft, appealing notes, the pitch of which is varied by changing the curvature of the blade.

All sorts of queer effects can be obtained by the adept manipulation of the blade; in fact, the music derived by this means can hardly be described. If anything, it resembles the human voice; then again it has the queer wail of the Hawaiian Ukulele. All in all, the effect is startling and pleasing.
