CONDITIONS ARE BAD IN MEXICO IS CHARGE

Mexico City, July 17.—Conditions in the northern border states of Mexico were characterized as immoral and disorderly by Roberto V. Pesqueira, financial agent for the Mexican government in the United States, in a statement he has just issued to the Mexican newspapers. Senor Pesqueira said the inscription which appears on signposts along the roads leading to Tijuana, Lower California, "To Mexico—the road to hell," was accurate. For a few years no one had been able to work with security in Chihuahua and, he added that "in Juarez, as in Lower California, formerly there was enthroned rapine in all its forms. One single example would suffice to show the immorality that exists there. The gambling concessions produced $11,500 monthly to the government, and the same concessionaries today are offering to pay $50,000 monthly for the same privilege."

Senor Pesqueira charged that Mexican laborers who crossed the line were being "villanously exploited" by labor agents, with the aid of the Mexican authorities. He likewise attacked the alleged practice of some American merchants who furnish office supplies to Mexican officials, of making out invoices for double the right amount.

"This fact shows the robbery that is being systematically committed against the national treasury and illustrates to what point official corruption has reached," Senor Pesqueira commented.

Two Familiar Phrases.

We often hear some one say that they will not buy a "pig in a poke." For the origin of this expression we must go back to the Middle Ages, when it was common in both France and England. Just as swindlers of a more recent time were fond of selling a "gold brick" to the unsuspecting, so the sharpers of an earlier age often tried to sell a pig in a poke, or a bag. The unwary buyer usually found afterward that the pig was a cat, and from his chagrin on making this discovery we get another familiar expression, "letting the cat out of the bag." James C. Young writes in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

AVIATOR SEASICK IN FLIGHT OVER KOREA

Tokio, July 17.—Lieutenant Ferrarin, one of the two famous Italian aviators who flew from Rome to Tokio, encountered such rough air conditions while crossing the length of Korea that they made him seasick. The tempest met in the Hakone mountains was unparalleled.

"In my entire flying experience," he said, "I had never before met with such conditions. The air was so disturbed over Korea that the machine pitched like a small boat in a heavy swell, and for the first time in my life I knew what it was to be seasick. As soon as I reached the straits, where an escort of Japanese destroyers was waiting for me, the air conditions improved and the rest of my flight to Tokio, except for the storm in the Hakone, was made in ideal weather."

One of the most difficult parts of his flight to Tokio, he explained, was between Rangoon and Bangkok where very heavy fogs were encountered, making it extremely difficult to keep on the course. Between Ubon and Hanoi, Lieutenant Ferrarin was forced to follow a train for about three hours in order to keep on the right course.

"The most exciting part of my trip occurred in Asia Minor," he said, "about 100 miles from Aleppo I was subjected to heavy machine gun fire by the Arab rebels. Again in Baluchistan, when I was forced to land on account of minor engine trouble, I was captured by the natives, imprisoned and not allowed to leave until I succeeded in establishing my identity. They thought I was a British aviator, but when they learned I was an Italian I was liberated."

Watch Your Weight.

Medical men all agree that in a great number of cases it would be of valuable assistance to them if patients could produce a weight record when going for advice; often it is impossible for a diagnosis to be given until a patient has tested his or her weight for a certain length of time.
