COMMON DECENCY

Appropos of the general success of Sunday's community picnic and last night's concert, a few words on common decency will not be amiss if they find the right audience.

In Webster's well known publication common decency is defined as being "that which is fit, suitable or becoming in behaviour." In this light, it is regrettable but true, that a disturbingly considerable number of people at the park during the picnic and concert appeared to be lacking in the common decency that the occasion should have demanded.

The sight that most aroused the ire of patriotic citizens, and especially those who served with the colors, was that some men, apparently Americans, lacked the common sense as well as the common decency to get up on their feet during the playing of the national anthem until ordered to do so.

Lack of regard for common decency was also displayed in the random running about of automobiles, opening of mufflers and various other disturbing agencies which interrupted the program.

respect during the rendition of a public program.

These matters should not require further notice and the whole public should unite to stop on the spot any further transgresses.

Need Traffic Cop

The need of a traffic officer in the park on special occasions like last night was evidenced by the congestion yesterday evening. Some drivers evidently could not read signs for they went to the left instead of the right on the narrow roadways in the park and at times tied up the line of cars that was moving along in the right direction.
