"Trimmer."

As a name for a certain kind of politician the word trimmer came into use shortly after the restoration of the Stuarts. It was used as a name of reproach for a person who tried to take two sides at the same time; "one who runs with the hare and hunts with the hounds." A more worthy meaning was that the person to whom it was applied was a moderate. It is said that in the reign of Charles II, a very able public man of the time, Charles Montague, earl of Halifax, adopted the term trimmer to signify that he was neither an extreme whig nor an extreme tory.
