Map of the National Park to Park Highway, the longest continuous scenic motor way in the world, traversing nine western states for a distance of 4,500 miles and connecting twelve national parks and many monuments and forests. The highway was dedicated to the people of America by Stephen T. Mather, director of the National Parks Service; governors of eight states, and officials of the National Park to Park Highway Association and the American Automobile Association, at Denver. Other dedicatory meetings are being held in cities on the route, in a sixty-day official tour. Congress will be asked to consider appropriations for converting this highway into a hard-surfaced boulevard, and for sufficient appropriations to adequately exploit and develop the scenic wonders in the playgrounds of the nation.
