BRITISH SUBJECTS NOT ALLOWED TO LAND

Honolulu, Aug. 31.—A number of British subjects including the mayor of a New Zealand city and a major in the British army, whose passports had not been vised by American consuls were refused permission to land and spend the day in Honolulu recently while the steamer Tahiti was loading and unloading on her way from Sydney, Australia, to Vancouver, B. C.

The Britishers were detained aboard the Tahiti at the order of R. L. Halsey, immigration inspector here. Halsey said he had his instructions from Secretary of State Colby, adding that he had received a cablegram to enforce the regulations strictly with regard to the Tahiti.

For vising a passport the American consuls in Australia charge a fee of $10, said Tahiti passengers who had conformed with the demand of the United States government.

Officials of the chamber of commerce took up the matter with the immigration officials here, but could obtain no relaxing of the rule, and an appeal has been sent to Washington to suspend the regulation which charges a through passenger of foreign birth $10 for the privilege of seeing Honolulu.

GEN. LOGAN W. R. C. RECEIVES NEW MEMBERS

Fully 100 members, invited guests and Civil war veterans gathered around the long white tables so bountifully spread Saturday afternoon at the close of one of the most interesting meetings held by Gen. Logan W. R. C. this summer. Eleven new members were added to the roll book by initiation, bringing the membership to 150.

It was to be regretted that no definite information could be given out relative to the cheaper rates to the Indianapolis G. A. R. and W. R. C. conventions to be held in that city beginning September 19th, but notice will be given through the city papers as soon as received.

Among the letters received from distant members is the following to Mrs. Alice Mallory, secretary of Gen. Logan W. R. C., from Mrs. Vina Opdyke, of Washington, D. C.:

"Dear Sister: I have been thinking for some time that I would write the corps a letter but a trip I took on July 4th and 5th made it complete in my mind that I should.

"Five ladies, myself and chauffeur left Washington on the morning of the 4th and motored out to Frederickburg, Md., passing over what is called the Conduit road. I did not realize that summer was so far advanced until we flew past fields of waving grain and a lot of it in the shock.

"After leaving Frederickburg, the old home of Barbara Fritchle, we began to ascend and by 1 o'clock we were high above the valley of the Potomac and could look 100 miles down the Shenandoah. This point is called Braddock Heights and figures in the Revolutionary period of history. This was surely a desirable prominence at that time when the armies did not have airplanes from which to make observations. It is used as a summer resort now and there are innumerable cottages and hotels. On the very top is a lookout tower and amusement park. We spent the rest of the day here. The next morning we started out and in a couple of hours reached the battle fields of Antietam. Of course this is well marked on a national monument. Markers show where the different divisions entered action and many states have erected monuments to their dead. I saw a picture of bloody flags posted at the end of it and the dead were laying two deep. All around is quiet and peaceful now, with the call of a meadow lark in the distance or the chirp of a robin close by as he hunted his mid-day meal. The ploughshare has turned the soil many times since the earth was soaked with blood and the grain and grasses have raised their heads to heaven in mute defiance of the peace that prevails everywhere. After leaving this hallowed spot we went on by circuitous lanes until we came to the old Harpers Ferry, a gap in the mountains. There were many things of interest to see: A monument erected to the memory of John Brown, a cave where the family silver was buried when the invading army came. Late in the afternoon we started back through the country, "green rolled by the hills of Maryland," reaching home in ample time to be rested for the following day's work. I am inclosing some cards that may be of interest to you. Barbara Fritchle's home, from the window of which she raised the flag; the Dunkard church on the battle field of Antietam, which has bullet holes all through it and is still used for church services, one of Washington's retreats, and a drive at Braddock's Heights, on which I have marked my location. I noticed from a Courier mailed me you had a real golden wedding in your midst. May the couple live to see many more cycles year around.

"Wishing you all happiness I will close in F. C. and L.
