Enid Bennett says: "Come on; let's raise the devil," and she tried hard to be "sporty" like the other woman—the woman in the suitcase. How she does it all makes the best Bennett picture yet released.

FRIVOLITIES AT PAGE SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

The stage at the Page theater of Medford will be the scene of silk stockings revel and nimble kneed carnival, for "Frivolities of 1920," the G. M. Anderson musical revue which was but lately an hilarious habitant of the 44th St. Theater, New York, comes to Medford for an engagement of two nights, next Saturday and Sunday.

The current edition of "Frivolities" is the first of a series, one of which annually will offer some solace to those whose lives are frayed around the edges because of the iniquities of the eighteenth amendment and kindred annoyances. As such it has the distinction of being the first amusement type ever designed to bridge a social chasm. "Frivolities" consists of a welter of specialties, singing, dancing and comical linked together by melodies, abounding with scenic and lighting novelties that have hitherto been strangers to the musical comedy stage.
