REPRESENTATIVES OF S. P. VISITED IN CITY

In order to get in closer touch with the patrons of the Southern Pacific company, J. A. Ormandy, assistant general passenger agent, with headquarters in Portland, and R. E. Kelly, representative of the executive department, of San Francisco, were in the city for a few hours this morning. They visited a number of local concerns and left later for Medford.

The gentlemen state that they have been hearing much about the Grants Pass irrigation project and say that they expect to see a heavy freight traffic out of Grants Pass in a few years. They were very optimistic over the future of southern Oregon.

The Southern Pacific is attempting to get back on a pre-war basis in rolling stock and service, according to Mr. Kelly. New equipment is being added to the road to take the place of that which was allowed to go to pieces during the period of government control. One serious difficulty which is being encountered is getting back an equal number of cars for those sent east. The preponderance of freight traffic is east and the empties are being sent west. The Southern Pacific is finding it hard to secure an equal exchange in cars and this works a hardship on the company.

Shippers, however, are cooperating splendidly in overcoming the shortage of cars. Mr. Kelly stated. The cars are being loaded to capacity and are being held only as short a time as possible. It is expected that the company will soon be back on its former basis.

SUGAR HEARINGS ARE RESUMED IN MEDFORD

Medford, Sept. 29.—The federal trade commission investigation of the charge that the Utah-Idaho Sugar company is a "combination in restraint of trade" was resumed yesterday morning, Judge J. J. Dunham, federal examiner, presiding.

George Austin, for 30 years head agriculturist of the sugar company, was the first witness for the defense, and his testimony dwelt largely with the growing of the beets, the securing of acreage, and the preliminary details of establishing the industry in southern Oregon.

Mr. Austin testified that after he was able to get a line on the true conditions, he told Mr. Saunders, one of the leading figures in the project, that it "was folly to build a factory, under the prevailing conditions." He said that Mr. Saunders replied, "that he was a faker or words to that effect." Mr. Austin also testified that the chief drawback to the proposition was the lack of water, and that conditions at Medford were better than Grants Pass, "if irrigation was installed."

The witness also testified that he told W. W. Harmon, formerly of this city, and well known as a civil engineer, "that it was a grand mistake to build the factory the way they did." Mr. Austin said that the arrangement of the factory did not meet with his approval, but that he could not get them changed. His complaint was that the conveyors and tracks were not built to yield the most efficient service.

He was questioned by Judge D. N. Stroup, legal representative of the Utah-Idaho company, which occupied the entire morning session, all phases being gone into with great detail.

At noon the hearing adjourned until 1:30 when the cross examination of Mr. Austin was started.
