in grinding his grist if in his machinery he used a gear that failed to mesh. His power equipment might be the best, the mill the most modern, but somewhere in the transmission of power he was using a cog wheel that was not built for the work—it was too small to mesh and the great engine whirred merrily on but was proving ineffective. We will have just such a situation in our governmental machinery if a cog wheel that fails to mesh is between the executive office and congress. In supporting Harding for president we must give him a republican senate and a republican house of representatives if the grist is to be ground from republican policies. Support Harding with a republican congress.

THE ROOSEVELT BIRD REFUGE MEASURE

The Portland Oregonian, in making its recommendations for voting upon the measures next Tuesday, admits no choice upon the bird refuge measure which would create the Roosevelt reserve in the Malheur lake district. There has been a lot of argument pro and con upon this measure, but the real spirit of the argument against the measure would serve as well to support the throwing open to the ends of selfishness and commerce every national park, national monument, reserve or preserve set aside for the enjoyment of the people and the preservation of nature and her wonders. Individuals would profit through the drainage of Malheur lake and its marshes, but the general public would not profit. Individuals would profit if they were allowed to quarry out the pure limestone that forms the beautiful decorations in the Josephine caves; but the public would be the loser. There is, furthermore, an industrial value to the millions of wild fowl that breed in the Malheur swamps as great probably as the value of the hay that might be produced from the alkalaladen acres. The Roosevelt bird refuge would be a fitting monument to the great lover of nature and of humanity whose name it would bear.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Florence Smith

Florence Smith was born in DuQuion, Ill., on September 9, 1892. She died in Klamath Falls on October 22, 1920, at the age of 28 years. Mrs. Smith was an ardent church worker, having joined the Christian church when she was nine years of age. She moved to Oregon in 1910, and to Klamath Falls in January, 1918, where she was also active in church work. Besides her husband, Earle Smith, she leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Smith, three brothers, Herbert, Carl and Dean, and two sisters, Mrs. Nellie Mayhew, of Pueblo, and Ruth, of Grants Pass, to mourn her loss.

Very Rude, indeed.

"I'm not going to that woman barber's again, there's a rude girl there, don't you know. Why she looked at my moustache and asked me if I would have it sponged off or rubbed in."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

'State - Wide' Telephone Service

Our efforts are constantly directed to the extension and improvement of "state-wide" telephone service. Large and small communities are dependent upon each other, commercially and socially. Good telephone equipment in the cities and towns of Oregon, with good construction and well maintained "long distance" pole lines and wires between, mean their mutual convenience and profit.

The value of any telephone is proportionate to the number of other telephones which may be connected with it. In Oregon there are approximately 138,000 telephones connected with our system. Ideal telephone service means the prompt connection of any one of these with any other and the least possible loss in strength and distinctness in the conversations that follow.

Our entire plant is engineered and constructed with the object of rendering a satisfactory "state-wide" service sufficient in facilities available and with these facilities efficiently maintained. For this purpose the telephone equipment must be better, local and trunk wires must be of proper size and type, and central offices and switchboards must have additional apparatus to accommodate and care for the long distance circuits.

Before the troubled period of the war we always aimed to maintain "spare" or reserve plant—that is, plant ahead of immediate needs, thus ensuring prompt and more satisfactory compliance with demands for service as they arose. During the war this reserve was exhausted as the materials we use were required and properly taken by the Government and those industries given priority consideration.

With the reconstruction period, as is the case with all other lines of business, our problems have continued to an unexpected degree. We are still hampered by shortage of materials and delayed deliveries.

We realize the requirements of our long distance patrons. We have a comprehensive and well defined program designed to provide additional toll circuits sufficient to meet the present and constantly growing demands.
