RECALL ACTION IS FAILURE
That the attempted recall election of Fred A. Williams, member of the Oregon Public Service commission, is a flash in the pan, is evidenced by the following article from the public press:

"There will be no attempted recall of Fred A. Williams, chairman of the Oregon public service commission, in connection with the special election to be held June 7. This was definitely settled late this afternoon, when the time expired for filing petitions with the secretary of state. Under the Oregon law a person against whom a recall election is directed has five days in which to resign after the petitions are filed with the secretary of state. The secretary of state then has 20 days in which to call the election. In other words, 25 days must elapse between the time of filing the petitions and the date of the election. "When the move to recall Mr. Williams first originated it was said that the question would be submitted to the voters at the special election June 7. Petitions later were placed in circulation, but reports reaching Salem today indicated that less than half enough signatures had been obtained."

A PERMANENT INDUSTRY
Alaska was a wonderful mining district, and is still a wonder. But the thing that caused the great rush to the northland was the find of placer gold and the firing of the hopes of men who knew little of the mining game with the desire for quick wealth. After that first rush and the gathering to the till of the millions that had been washed from the ledges through ages of time, Alaskan mining settled down to a more matter-of-fact business. The same thing is history in practically every mining district. California had its rush in '49, the same rush that moved northward two years later and brought excitement to southern Oregon. The placer gold was the quest of the argonaut. A quick clean-up and then the miner joined the rush to the latest discovery. But behind him came more substantial development, and for more than 50 years southern Oregon has been an every-day producer of mineral wealth. Yet it is in one sense an undiscovered country. Just now are the sources of wealth being hunted within the womb of mother earth, and the veins and ledges that descend below the surface are found as rich as were the original placers. The indications point to vast bodies of mineralized rock that will make rich mines for many years to come. It is a field for investment that will attract the capital required to develop it and will create industry and payroll. The dollar taken from the ground is a new dollar. The record of the Boswell is proving the fact that Josephine's mines are more than pockets.

Railroad Has Cut Dining Car Prices.
Reductions of from 15 to 25 per cent in dining car charges have been announced by the Great Northern railroad, which has also declared it will put into effect this year special summer tourist passenger rates at reductions of from 20 to 25 per cent.

More Than 2 Men for Each Position.
The unemployment situation has become so acute in cities in Illinois that the ratio of applicants for jobs is now more than two and one-half to one in the larger cities, according to official figures.

Progress in Wrong Direction.
Jud Tunkins says if he had his life to live over he'd probably make the same mistakes, only owing to improved modern facilities he'd maybe make 'em faster and more numerous.

AMUSEMENTS

"County Fair" a Winner
Maurice Tourneur's "The County Fair" is now playing a special engagement at the Rivoli theater.

The story is taken from the play in which Neil Burgess starred all over the country for many seasons. It is one of those studies of rural American life which are chuck full of heart interest, quaint humor and all the excitement incident to a day at a county fair and winding up with a thrilling horse race in which the entry of the leading characters not only triumphs over the crooked schemers in winning the event but taking down a purse that saves the farm of Aunt Abigail and her deserving associates. It is likened to a trip to the country on a sweet summer day and has taken the motion world by storm.

Story of Saint-Saens.
An ambitious woman at one of Saint-Saens' Mondays fairly browbeat him into accompanying her two daughters in a duet. After enduring as long as he could the torture of their timeless and tuneless performance he turned to the mother with, "Which of your daughters, madam, do you wish me to accompany?"—D. G. Mason in "From Grieg to Brahms."

His records played on imitations would give you something—but it would be something less than the best.

Poet's Pat Quotation.
A lady wrote to Tennyson asking him for his autograph and a sentiment. Receiving no reply, she wrote again, and followed this by request after request. Finally her persistence was rewarded, the poet sending her a sheet of paper on which he had written: "A Tennyson Sentiment: 'Ask me no more.'"—Boston Transcript.
