THE GOVERNOR AND THE VETO

If governors of states always met the ideal formulated in the public mind it would be in the interests of the public well to clothe them with all possible authority and power. But states have been extremely unfortunate on occasion in choice of governor, or at least fate has been unkind in the manner of men who were foisted upon the state as governor on occasion, and more authority and more power in the hands of such men is an unsafe thing. To ward against these accidents, states must therefore use discretion. Legislatures are safer, and the veto power is a much abused thing with men who have an overpowering ego.

At the special election soon to be held the voter will find upon the ballot a bill that would give the governor authority to veto the emergency clause to acts of the legislature. The governor already has the power to veto a bill in toto, or to veto single items in other bills, a power that has met much abuse. Through it a single man can set aside the combined thought of a body of representative men, each of whom may be a wiser man than the governor himself. For this reason the veto power should be held within bounds, and bounds have already been exceeded in Oregon. The measure should therefore be defeated.

At a hearing held before the state irrigation securities commission at Salem Wednesday a number of irrigation districts sought certification of bond issues for the building of their projects. Grants Pass was one of these districts, and its bonds were readily certified upon the showing of sale at a price within 10 points of par. The Grants Pass bonds brought the best price of any certified Wednesday. Another sale of $580,000 by eastern Oregon districts went at only 80 cents on the dollar, and this in the fact of a cost-plus contract which the district was entering into. It was an excellent showing from a comparative point of view for the Grants Pass district.

CALIFORNIA GLEE PROGRAM DIFFERENT

The program of the University of California glee club differs materially from that presented by most college glee clubs. There are serious songs, college songs, plantation songs and humorous songs by the club of course, but the main feature of the program is the vaudeville acts. Director Morse doesn't allow an act to go on until the actors have acquired the necessary finish in their work. There is nothing amateurish about the glee club's program.

Owing to their world wide experience and numerous appearances on the stage the members of the club have all acquired the aplomb of professionals. Particularly is this noticeable in the case of Charles Strickfadden, saxophone soloist, Dave Phennig, violinist, Harold Girvin, singer of character songs and Ross Himes, who dances and sings.

The glee club will give their varied program at the opera house on May 30th.

AFTERNOON ENTERTAINERS TO PRELUDE EVENING TALK

Dr. Edward Parker Miles, who will lecture on "Tallow Dips" at the Chautauqua tonight has interviewed King Edward, Balfour, the Kaiser, Gladstone and many other notable men and fairly peoples the stage with the different characters. "Tallow Dips" has been given over 6,700 times, showing the popularity of the performance draws.

The Liberty Belles, a trio of young ladies, gave the entertainment this afternoon, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, solos and dramatic readings. The prelude this evening will be by the Liberty Belles.

AMUSEMENTS

Harry Carey at the Rivoli
Harry Carey, one of the most unique and unusual of all screen stars, plays the stellar role in "The Freeze Out," the picture which will be shown as the feature attraction at the Rivoli theater today and tomorrow. "The Freeze Out" is a story laid in the West in the days when the chief building in town was the saloon and gambling house. A stranger comes to town. He sees that the old gambling house in town is crooked, so he decides to open one of his own. And in the end, when he changes his plans, it is a girl, as usual, who is to blame. Supporting Carey in this production is Helen Ferguson, an experienced and accomplished leading woman, who will be recognized by many followers of the screen.
