FEAR GHOST OF BIG WOODS

Reported Appearance of "Stick Siwash" Causes Indians to Abandon Hunting Grounds Precipitately.

The "Stick Siwash" has returned to haunt the trapping grounds north of Fort St. James. Terror stalks the wilderness trails and panic grips the Indians. If a brave hears the crackle of a twig in the woods he looks about him in fear that this ghost of the big woods is dogging his steps. A number of Indians, it is said, have been frightened off their trap lines.

Fort St. James is one of the oldest posts in British Columbia owned by the Hudson's Bay company. It was founded in 1806 by Simon Fraser, the pioneer explorer for whom the Fraser river was named. Several hundred Indians live about the fort and market their furs there.

"Me ketchum fox in trap," said Musk-a-no-wah, who has abandoned his trap line on Manson creek. "Me hear little noise. Look up. See Stick Siwash. He heap big Indian. Got war paint on. He look mean. He say nothing. Wave tomahawk like he say, 'You get out.' Me heap scared. Shake like leaf. Me run back to camp. Tell squaw and papoose. Pack up and get out heap quick, by golly, you bet. Stick Siwash bad medicine."

Other Indians have brought back the same story from the Manson creek region. The "Stick Siwash" has long figured in the traditions of British Columbia tribes. The name means ghost of the big woods. "Stick" is slang for forest and "Siwash" is a corruption of the French word "Sauvage," and is applied to all the Indians of the Pacific coast. The superstitious natives believe the appearance of the apparition presages misfortune to the tribes.

WOODWARD'S

A. F. OF L. CALLS FOR WAR

"It is difficult to appraise accurately the temperament and attitude of many of the men elected to both the house of representatives and the senate."

The convention is called on to continue labor's non-partisan political activities.

Speaking of labor's enemies, the report declares the "open shop" campaign has gained no headway.

"It is true the organized employers are still making strenuous efforts to destroy trade unionism and that in many directions the campaign to reduce wages continues," says the report. "What is equally true is that these movements continue with constantly decreasing vigor and effect and that their momentum of three months ago has been dissipated."

The report demands labor call a halt on dissension within its ranks.

"When labor is confronted by an enemy such as it has never been called upon to meet and overcome in the past two decades, it seems to us," says the executive council in the report, "that we should all for ourselves as well as jointly call a halt at least to the unnecessary and unwarranted jurisdictional claims and conflicts and devote ourselves wholeheartedly to the work in hand."

The report urges cooperative labor banks, credit unions and other cooperative enterprises as a curb to profiteering.

"To stimulate rapid development of cooperatives the Federal Loan act should be extended so as to give credit to properly organized cooperatives just as credit is now given to individual farmers," says the report. "Cooperation is no less vital and worthy of support than are the railroads, which were given hundreds of millions of dollars and an area of land equal to New England to facilitate their establishment."

Recommend Disarmament
"We repeat and emphasize the demand of organized labor that central of credit capital be taken from the hands of private financiers and placed in the hands of a public agency to be administered by voluntary and cooperative methods."

The report recommends that the convention call upon the president to take the initiative or cooperate with other nations to bring about universal disarmament.

"The working people, the masses in the world population, can end wars if they have the independence to think and to give their convictions reality by daring to do," says the report.

The report reiterates the Federation's stand for Japanese exclusion and land laws, charging that a national anti-labor organization is engaged in a campaign to amend the Chinese exclusion act to permit importation of Chinese labor. It touches on the danger of war with Japan and expresses confidence that the Japanese workers are as anxious as American labor for friendly relations.

The report puts the Federation on record against the proposed department of public welfare sponsored by President Harding, declaring it will weaken the department of labor. It announces labor's opposition to a sales-tax or other new taxes.

MADE STUDY OF FISHES

Eminent Naturalists Who Gave Good Service to Humanity, and to the Finny Tribes.

It is reported that when Dr. Frank Buckland, the great naturalist, was in his last sickness, he said to an anxious friend that he could not believe Almighty God would be very hard upon one who loved His fishes and other living things as much as he did.

Another friend of the fishes, Sir Charles Edward Fryer, knight, died not long ago at Watford, near London, England.

His whole life since he began active work was devoted to the promotion of knowledge of fish and fishes, in relation to the service of mankind. There was no higher authority. He was awarded endless medals and honors by exhibitions and societies for his monographs and annual and other reports.

He was one of the first to define the international regulation of fisheries of the high seas, and was a leading member of many fish congresses and commissions.

He was the final authority, with the last deciding word to say on all matters relating to fish and the fishing industries.
