THE CARELESS TOURIST
The careless tourist is the object of an editorial in the Pine Cone, published by the New Mexico Protective association.

"One of the greatest blessings of modern civilization is the automobile, but one of its greatest scourges is the careless tourist.

"There's never a law of God nor man runs north of fifty-three—nor beyond the city limits of the careless tourist's home town.

"The most beautiful camp spots along our highways are littered with melon rinds, tin cans, and Sunday supplements.

"Tourists may be a handsome source of revenue and all that sort of thing, but we venture the belief that the average New Mexican would prefer the Vandal brand of tourist to keep his money and stay at home.

commission was sent to investigate, the conclusions of the commission resulting in a new loan agreement under an international receivership reserved to the United States and Great Britain.

After Liberia entered the war the German cable and radio stations, as well as German private property, being left in the hands of the American receiver general as alien property custodian.

While there has been no official announcement as to the recommendation made by Secretary Hughes on the advisability of the loan, the traditional policy of the United States towards Liberia would suggest favorable consideration.

the bank of British West Africa Limited, an English concern which practically controls the banking situation in Liberia, just as the Elder Dempster Company, a British steamship line, practically controls the transportation facilities of the republic.

Early in 1918 Liberia made an appeal to the secretary of the treasury of the United States for a loan of $5,000,000. A commission headed by Charles Dunbar Burgess King, president of Liberia, came to Washington recently to negotiate the loan.

On April 15 President King was received by President Harding, and from time to time members of the commission have been in conference with officials of the treasury and state departments.

Defining the American attitude toward Liberia, Daniel Webster said in 1843: "Without having passed laws for recognition, the United States takes a deep interest in the welfare of the people of Liberia and is disposed to extend a full degree of countenance and protection."

Phoenix Built on Ruins.
By far the most interesting remains of the lost people of Arizona are their network of canals which prevail through all the valleys.

The volume of water taken out by this canal must have been immense, for it supported millions of acres. In most places the canal has been filled with drifting sand, but its course is easily traced.

For miles and miles around mounds tell the tale of houses destroyed by the ravages of time. Phoenix was built on the ruins of this ancient city, and the relics frequently are found of this ancient civilization.

Color and Light.
To get color and light is the great thing. The difficulty is to get them both. Turner, in his Italian landscapes, enhanced the color of his sky by a dark pine-tree in the foreground, sacrificing the color of the tree for the sake of accenting its value and warmth.

"Fool's Gold."
The material commonly called fool's gold is iron pyrite, a combination of sulphur and iron in almost equal parts which is used in making sulphuric acid.
