These Leaders Were Eaters. General Grant is said to have praised soup. Thackeray wrote a poem on French soup. Mark Hanna's hash made him and many of his friends happy. The great Emerson had a weakness for pie. Bismarck's heart was broken when the barrel of caviar regularly sent to him every year was forwarded to his successor after the "Man of Iron" had been removed from office. Napoleon compelled his cooks always to have broiled chicken at hand. From the Mrs. Lincoln mince-meat recipe it may be suspected that President Lincoln may have "hankered" for that variety of pastry. Samuel Johnson, whenever he was fortunate to have a hare that had been kept too long, or meat pie made with rancid butter, gorged himself, and he drank "oceans of tea." King Henry I of England liked lampreys so well that he died from eating them.

Criminal's Fatal Slip. A curious error, due to the criminal's ignorance of science, actually kept the evidence of one murder intact for 12 months. The murderer after killing his victim, a woman, placed the body in a dry cellar and covered it with chloride of lime. He thought the lime would destroy the identity of the body, whereas it did exactly the opposite. The body was in such a good state of preservation a year after that the medical experts had no difficulty in establishing through it the vital clue to the crime and the criminal. If the man only had mixed some water with the lime he might have escaped detection.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WILDERVILLE

The preserving, jamming, jellifying pickling period of activity has about passed with the Wilderville household. Jack Frost is laying a pretty heavy hand on the corn as well as crimsoning the maple leaf, and that is a forcible reminder to the farmer that it is high time for him to get in on the canning game. The hum of machinery is heard at almost every farm and silos are filling fast.

Claudius Robinson has accepted the principalship of Glide high school and will assume his duties Monday morning. Mrs. Robinson and the children will follow him later. The entire family will be missed, especially in church circles this winter.

Mrs. Hannah Cassidy, of Weed, Cal., is spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace. Mr. Cassidy and his mother drove up with Mrs. Cassidy, but business necessitated his return Monday morning. Mrs. Cassidy says the drive over the Siskiyou is delightful and especially beautiful now that the woods are putting on their fall coloring.

Jim and Harry Lindsay are in Klamath county working at a lumber yard. The young people of the neighborhood are hoping to see them home this winter.

Wilderville turned out en masse to the fair last Saturday.

Summer vacation is a thing of the past, we know, because morning and afternoon the children are trudging to and from school.
