AMUSEMENTS

Frank Mayo Back in New Photoplay
After appearing in several big pictures of the outdoors Frank Mayo returns once more to the drawing room type of story and will be seen at the Rivoli theater today and tomorrow in "The Fighting Lover." But although Mayo dons evening clothes in this story, he loses none of his accustomed vim and vigor. The title of the picture is a true index to the star's personality. "The Fighting Lover" was written by Ben Ames Williams.

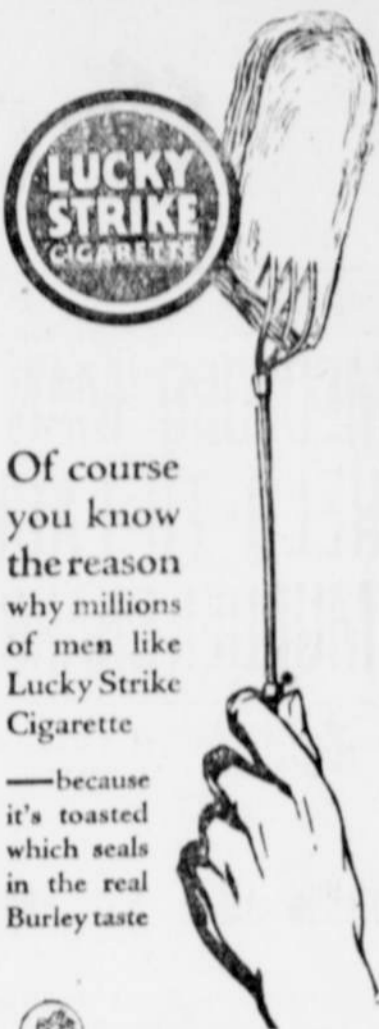

Rogue Salmon Attract Notables—There are two interesting and interested fishers on the Rogue river today. They are Mr. and Mrs. H. Spens-Black, of London, England, and they have come to Medford expressly to fish at the invitation and recommendation of William F. Isaacs. Mr. Spens-Black is an expert fisherman having angled and cast in New Zealand, Alaska, British Columbia and in fact all the real fishing places in the world, but he unhesitatingly states that the Rogue is the best of them all. With its natural surroundings and rugged beauty and its unsurpassed steelheads it is perfection so the gentleman fisherman says. Mr. Spens-Black has had unusually good luck and expects to remain for some time.—Medford Clarion.

Fire Hazard Not Lessened—So far the possibility of forest fires has not been eliminated by the scanty amount of rain that has fallen, though there are at present no fires in this district, according to the forest service office. Old slashings constituting a possible menace are being burned under state supervision following a state-wide campaign against the slashings.

BORN—To Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Baldwin, of Holland, Wednesday, September 21, a daughter.
