GARDNER NOT A HERO

Roy Gardner, bandit, writes to a San Francisco newspaperman the story of his escape from the federal prison at McNeil's Island, and again a bit of hectic acclamation will go up from a few perverted minds. Gardner, if the letter is authentic, asks that he be pardoned by President Harding. He is certainly basing his desire for pardon upon the success of his many escapes from the clutches of the law, otherwise he would have remained in the prison and by exemplary behavior have stood a chance of being pardoned or paroled.

To date no one has offered the suggestion that the robber who stole the registered mail pouch from the Southern Pacific Saturday night was by any chance Roy Gardner.

STUDY DEMANDS OF MARKETS

Poultryman Should Learn How, Where and When to Dispose of Products to Advantage.

A large part of the profit in poultry keeping often depends upon the proper marketing of the products, and the producer should study the market demands as to how, where and when to dispose of the products to the best advantage.

Special A. F. & A. M. Tuesday—

There will be a special meeting of Grants Pass lodge No. 84, A. F. and A. M. Tuesday afternoon commencing at 4 o'clock. Dinner will be served at 6, Kerby lodge being guests of the evening. There will be work in the M. M. degree.

Many Go Fishing—

Though a large number of people spent Sunday with a hook and line, no fancy catches have been reported. Those who used a spoon seemed to have had an edge on the others.

Notice to Subscribers—

Subscribers are requested to make payments to the office and not to the carrier boys. Boys have no authority to collect. When a change of address is to be made always notify the office.

Attended Elks Barbecue—

Several prominent Elks and their families motored to Medford yesterday to attend the huge barbecue given by Medford lodge, 1168. Nearly 700 of the antlered herd enjoyed the outing, the venison and baked steel head salmon. Various games and a tug of war provided amusement for the gathering. Those making the trip were C. H. Corson, Mike Clemens, William Lempke, James T. Chinnock, Carl Williams and their families.

Up to Specifications.

"I do not insist," the old gentleman said, "that the man my daughter marries shall have wealth, provided he has sound judgment and unusual cleverness."

"Well, you must admit, sir," the youth replied, "that I showed sound judgment in selecting you as a prospective father-in-law, and considerable cleverness in getting Grace to accept as ordinary-seeming and poor a chap as I am."—New York Sun.

Final. "She refused you." "Tentatively." "What do you mean by 'tentatively'?" "She said she would marry me when my salary got to be $10,000 a year." "That wasn't a tentative refusal."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

IN RED AND BLACK

The vogue for black has made such an impression on the world of fashion that designers of children's clothes have taken advantage of it in the production of new things for fall. It appears in this pretty dress with its waist of black taffeta silk and hand embroidered dots of red. The skirt is red and black Scotch plaid with a wide belt that folds over a narrow black sash of crepe ribbon.

Prize Stock for Canada. The prince of Wales won most of the prizes with his exhibits of Short-horn cattle and Shropshire sheep at the agricultural show, held recently in England. He declared his intention of shipping some of these farm animals to his ranch in Alberta, Canada, where there is already a fine blooded aggregation.

VALUABLE HINTS FOR HOT WEATHER

Why Our Bodies Swell During High Temperature.

DULK COUNTS IN OUR FOOD

Rolling Up the Shirt Sleeves in Theory and Practice—Medical Facts Give Some Little Known Facts Which May Be of Value to the Average Person Who Must Endure Hot Weather—The Active Function and the Digestive Function.

Some little known facts, the possession of which is of value to the average person who must endure hot weather, are called to public attention by the medical correspondent of The London Times. For instance it is not known by the majority of people that the body tends to swell in hot weather, just as the skin does. A knowledge of this fact is of importance to those who intend to wear belts or tight clothing when it is inordinately warm, according to the physician, for, forearmed with this knowledge, they can avoid these constrictions.

The physician says that two functions of the body are always to be discerned and differentiated, the active function and the digestive function. The active man is using his brain and his muscles; the digestive man is using his stomach, liver and their internal organs. This is simple enough. What is less simple, or at least less easy for the layman to grasp, is that the nervous system plays a deciding part in both states.

Ask the average man, the doctor suggests, why, at certain moments of his life, he has squared his shoulders and doubled his fists. He will answer: "To fight, of course." And the emphasis on the words "of course" will often reveal his idea that the question is as unnecessary as the reply is obvious. But, says the physician, there is nothing obvious about it, as is seen when we reflect that when the shoulders are squared and fists doubled the heart beats quicker and the bowels are emptied of blood. A vast and sudden change has swept over every cell in the body in response to—what? To the sight of an enemy. That is to say to an impression or sensation reaching the eyes—or it may be the ears.

The fact emerges—it is sensation, stimulation, events or conditions in the outside world which decide that a particular man shall be active or digestive.

Feeling the Draught.

The physician takes for an example the stimulus of cold. On a cold day the skin receives a kind of bombardment of what he calls "small calls to action," which act on the nerves of this structure and whip them to action. As a result, the small blood vessels of the body are closed, digestive processes are stayed, and the muscles are filled with blood. Thus in cold weather we feel active and are filled with energy.

Quickly moving air naturally cools a man faster than slowly moving air; and damp air is less cooling than dry because there is less evaporation.

Consequently, says the physician, on a hot day with still air, the amount of "cold stimuli" reaching a man's skin is greatly reduced. There are no calls for action of this sort, and the blood vessels tend to remain dilated and open. The blood stays in the body and the body is swollen.

But, we are reminded by the writer, at any time the arrival of food into the stomach is a call for blood for that organ, just as the approach of an enemy is a call for blood to brain and muscles. So in hot weather when food is eaten the already swollen body tends to swell more.

In patients with digestive troubles and heart troubles, the physician tells us, the result of this swelling in hot weather, after a full meal, may be most unpleasant. They feel their "breath short-circuited," they seem to have an oppression on their chests, they feel giddy. In some cases they may faint.

Stripped for Action.

It is obvious then that during hot weather the middle-aged man whose nervous system, thanks to his sedentary life, is less well-balanced than it used to be must act in the light of the knowledge available. In the first place, he must do all that he can to give his skin a chance. He must play for stimulation, so to speak, in order to counteract the tendency of his blood to gather in his body.

He should take off his coat when he gets to his office and roll up his shirt-sleeves. He should open all the windows, but screen out the sunlight. The resulting currents of air playing on his bare arms will give him a really valuable degree of stimulation. A wet towel with which the bare arms may be rubbed occasionally is not a bad idea.

Secondly, he must not eat heavily during the day. It is bulk that counts most, for the greater the bulk the more the tendency to draw blood into the body.

Finally, exercise should be postponed till evening. It should not be abandoned on any account, for the secret of good health is good exercise.

The song that should be in every home!

Citrus By-Products.

In cooperation with the citrus fruit growers of California, the United States bureau of chemistry has been trying for some years past to develop methods whereby profitable uses might be found for the enormous quantities of oranges and lemons which now go to waste because unfit for shipment. It does not pay to ship to market any fruit that is not first class and in prime condition. Of waste oranges called "culis," there are 14,000 tons a year. What shall be done with them? A partial answer to the question is furnished by a score of factories which have already been put in operation for the production of marmalade and jellies. Also, a profitable market has been found for orange oil and lemon oil, orange vinegar, citric acid and dried orange peel. Fresh orange acid is used for the marmalade, while the oil is extracted by pressure from the skins. Up to the present time all of our orange oil and lemon has come from Italy and Sicily.

Kipling's "Brevities"

It is quite true, as Mrs. Gerould says, that Mr. Kipling's fame rests upon "significant brevities," but what she and critics of a similar complexion cannot see is that these "brevities" are "significant" in a sense diametrically opposed to her interpretation of the word. She means, of course, to be complimentary, to intimate that Mr. Kipling is brief from choice, whereas the exact reverse is the truth, and, far from being brief from choice, Mr. Kipling is brief from necessity. Mrs. Gerould would intimate that Mr. Kipling prefers the short story, whereas, in point of fact, Mr. Kipling's gifts restrict him to the short story.—F. A. Waterhouse, in the Yale Review.

Pioneer Log Building Restored.

An old log building, near Chehalis Wash., which housed one of the first federal courts ever held in the Pacific Northwest, has been rehabilitated and presented to the state. The building erected in 1845, housed Gen. Phil Sheridan and Gen. George B. McClellan when they were in the northwest before the Civil war and had to travel between Fort Vancouver, on the Columbia river, and Fort Steilacoom, on Puget sound.
