ROWEN MUST SERVE TERM IN STATE PRISON

HIGH COURT AFFIRMS SENTENCE OF THE JOSEPHINE COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT

WAS CONVICTED OF FORGERY

Was Charged With Making a Phoney Quit Claim Deed to Property in the Illinois Valley

R. J. Rowen must serve three years in the state penitentiary at Salem for a forgery charge committed more than four years ago and on which he was convicted in the circuit court, an appeal to the supreme court of the state having confirmed the findings of the lower court. His bondsmen have been notified to produce him in order that the sentence may be served. The decision of the higher court was received yesterday.

Rowen was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of forgery of a quit claim deed to mining property on the Illinois river, April 2, 1917.

Testimony in the case tended to show that the alleged forged deed was presented to the county clerk by J. T. Gilmore, a partner in mining deals with Rowen. The whole tenor of the testimony was to the effect that those interested in the prosecution never had possession of the alleged forged deed.

In examining the case, the supreme court decided that Rowen had had a fair trial and no errors were found, and affirmed the judgment of the lower court.

Following the indictment by the grand jury, more than four years ago, Rowen was not brought to trial until January 1, 1920, and received his sentence a week later. The case was again argued and submitted to the supreme court on June 23, 1921. He was released on $1000 bonds after his trial, nearly two years ago. Mr. Rowen has been employed in Medford as an auto salesman while out on bail awaiting the decision of the higher court.
