OBITUARY

Frances Helen Windell
Frances Helen Gillilan, was born at Grants Pass, Oregon, June 28th, 1892. The family moved to Colorado in 1900, returning again to Grants Pass three years later.

Her girlhood was spent at that place. She was married in Portland to H. C. Windell on December 7th, 1917. In 1920 they moved to Burns, Oregon, but came again to Portland the following year.

She died on January 31st, 1923, after a lingering illness, leaving her son, 2 1/2 years old, her husband, parents, two sisters and a brother.

She was a loving and obedient daughter, a loyal friend, and an affectionate and conscientious wife and mother, an earnest Christian from her early youth. Her cheerful presence and her sterling virtues endeared her to many friends, who will sadly miss her presence.

Duties of Executive Position.
If you are fortunate enough to reach an executive position, keep in mind that a great executive is a person who never does anything he can have done by any one else, but who nevertheless always keeps busy, not necessarily with hands and feet, but with his thoughts.—Henry L. Doherty.

Stops Coughs and Colds
Neglected coughs and colds lead to influenza, a grippé, asthma and bronchitis, and the old method of "letting it run its course" is rapidly giving way to preventive treatment. Three generations of users have testified to the quick relief given by Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds, croup, throat, chest and bronchial trouble. Contains no opiates—ingredients printed on the wrapper. Refuse imitations and substitutes. Couch's Pharmacy, Adv.

THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND NEVER SUSPECT IT

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made an astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

OIL QUESTION AT LAUSANNE TROUBLESOME

Washington, Feb. 13.—(I. N. S.)—"Too much oil on troubled waters" is the way the cynical diplomat diagnosed the Lausanne conference situation when the statesmen gathered there yere at the height of their difficulties over the question of Mesopotamia.

Certainly, from the point of view of the American government at least petroleum was among the most important of all the matters discussed there. Secretary of State Hughes is on record as favoring the freedom of the straits, protection of racial and religious minorities in Turkey, and preservation of American rights under the so-called capitulations. But he is just as strongly on record for the maintenance of the open door, or equal opportunity for American capital in the development of the natural resources of former Turkish territory.

Ambassador Child, the American "observer" at Lausanne, threw a bombshell into the conference when he stated America's attitude toward Mosul, the rich oil region of Mesopotamia. For more than three years the United States has been waging a fight against European diplomacy for the right to participate in the development of the Mesopotamian fields. It began during the regime of President Wilson, when Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby indulged in some rather heated exchanges with Lord Curzon, British foreign secretary, regarding the principle of the open door as applied to British mandated territory in Asia Minor.

American connection with the oil fields of Asia Minor goes back even further, however. In 1899 Rear Admiral Chester, U. S. N., was sent to Constantinople in command of the battleship Kentucky to demand compensation for property of American missionaries, which had been destroyed in the Armenian massacres of 1896. On his return to America he interested certain American financiers in the possibility of obtaining concessions from Turkey. Going back to Constantinople as the agent of a powerful group, he obtained promises for extensive railway and mining privileges in Asia Minor, and the right to prospect for oil in Armenia and Mesopotamia. The fall of Abdu Hamid in 1909 interrupted the negotiations, and the Chester interests have since experienced difficulty in establishing their claims.

Then came the discovery by the Germans of oil in paying quantities near Mosul. They reported the discovery to Berlin, it is alleged, but concealed it from the Porte, and the deception being discovered their hopes of concessions were blasted. Later, however, German and British groups, with the support of their governments, began negotiations and in 1913 came to some sort of a tentative understanding with the Porte.

The chief argument advanced by Lord Curzon against the American claim for participation in the development of the Mesopotamian oil fields was based upon the alleged concessions of this Turkish Petroleum Company, the validity of which have been consistently disputed by the American government.

At the San Remo conference in 1921 the German shares were assigned to the French government. Whether it has held them or disposed of them to French investors is not known. Immediately upon the announcement of the partition of the oil rights of Mesopotamia the American government entered a vigorous protest, urging that although the United States had not been at war with Turkey, America had contributed to the common victory over the Central Powers and the United States therefore was entitled to "an equal opportunity" in the development of mandated territories ceded by Turkey.

When Hughes assumed office he pressed the open door principle with the utmost vigor, and after some delay secured an "agreement in principle" from the British. It is understood that there now exist no serious differences of opinion between the United States and Great Britain on the subject.

Frosting Light Bulbs.
Make a strong solution of alum in water and dip the bulbs into it, allowing the alum to crystallize on the glass. The solution may be colored with various dyes to give a more pleasing effect.

Endangers Fur Animals.
According to Dr. William T. Hornaday it takes 80 skins to make the average mink wrap, 200 for a squirrel coat, and 280 for a black mole coat. 90 skins may go to the making of a striped skunk jacket, and 800 to a Siberian ermine wrap. Before many years, if the present rate of slaughter continues, many of our most interesting animals will be practically extinct; even now the trapper is forced farther afield, and skins once unmarketable are being used to supply the deficiency.—Scientific American.

Undertaker Gets His First.
Under Kansas law, in the final settlement of a case in probate court, if there is not enough money to go "round the undertaker" he is the only one who is paid in full. The doctor, the printer and even the judge himself, must pre-empt the remainder. Every body except the undertaker must lose some of all of his bill. The dead must be buried.—Cotlier's Weekly.

"TOO TRUSTFUL"

Miss Dorothea Koch is "too trustful" of men, says Margie Withrow (above), who rescued Miss Koch from a hotel room in San Francisco after Miss Koch, as she alleges, had been held prisoner for several days by Lee Herbert, an automobile man. Miss Koch has filed suit for $25,000 damages. Herbert has denied the charges.
