Radio Fans Have Trouble—

Practically every radio fan in the city has been experiencing trouble lately with his radio. There appears to be an atmospheric condition here which causes the music and other broadcast to come in with a "frying" noise. Each fan has laid the trouble on his own set but it appears to be a general condition in the city.

Cavemen's Concert Heard—

The concert broadcast last night from the Oregon tower in Portland by the Cavemen, was heard by local listeners last night. The music did not come through as well as was hoped but other sections apparently heard it well for inquiries began pouring in at the station immediately for directions as to how to get to the Caves. The concert was given by local talent and is said to have made a most interesting program. The Neilsons, A. K. Cass, a quartet of Cavemen and the Cavemen's chorus were called upon. M. L. Oddyke gave a talk on the Caves in which he told of the beauties which would be found there.

Yesterday Quite Wet—

For a June day in Southern Oregon, yesterday was exceedingly wet. The rainfall during the day amounted to .21 inch, the rain falling intermittently all day. Some hail was mixed with the rain. The weather report is for fair.

Power Was Off—

Due to the fact that the power was off over an hour last night, the Courier was late in reaching the subscribers. The power went off first at 3 o'clock delaying the setting of type for the issue. It came on long enough to get the forms on the press when it again failed and it was impossible to get the papers off before dark. All operations at the office are held up whenever the power fails for electric energy is all that is used.

Sees Future for Valley—

Recently E. E. Roropough made a trip to Yakima and Wenatchee in Washington. There he found conditions exceptionally good, with business booming and plenty of money. He attributed the condition there to the irrigation of the lands adjacent to the city. The Rogue River valley was brought forcibly to mind and Mr. Roropough states that he expects the valley here to be the same way in a very few years. In 1902 when he visited Yakima he found a small place with but a few acres under irrigation. The city has grown to have a population of over 20,000 with bank deposits high in the millions. Mr. Roropough suggests a trip to that part of Washington for anyone who doubts the value of irrigation. He is selling the bonds of the local district and has become greatly enthused over the prospects here.

Must Not Take Fawns—

People of the county are warned by Game Warden Bancroft that they must not molest fawns when they are found in the woods. Many of these fawns are taken by people who find them in the forests. The young deer are so tame that they will run right up to a person but after being handled, their mothers will have nothing to do with them and they are liable to starve to death. Unless it is known for certain that the mothers will have nothing to do with them and they are liable to starve to death, unless it is known for certain that the mother is dead, they fawn which has not been reported
