WILDERVILLE

A visit to the caves is tremendously interesting. In the first place, the road is good, the scenery is beautiful and having reached your destination Mr. Sabins' glad hand and genial smile are worth going far to meet.

Having donned coveralls you gather with a score or more sightseers at the mouth of the cavern, where the cold draft of air striking you makes you feel that it is an awesome thing to venture into the silence and mystery hidden beneath the great masses of earth and rock. You feel that it is here that "things which know not man's dominion dwell," and a spooky thrill chases down your spinal column. For several minutes after venturing in, even the loquacious fat lady is subdued, as the crowd, each with his tiny glimmer of light single files through the narrow passage. Soon the first iron ladder appears and the fat lady shows signs of distress which increases with each climb until finally having scaled the 50-foot ladder she collapses.

"Oh, mother dear, what is the matter?" asks anxious daughter.

"It's the climb it," gasps mother dear.

Miss Taylor will not teach the primary department of the Wilderville school next year. It is reported that Miss Alice Loughridge will carry on.

this work, which is another proof that the Wilderville people believe in keeping the very best of their home products at home. Miss Taylor has spent a number of years as an educator, as an old professor used to express it, "teaching the young school how to do it," and now she has installed her loom at the Doerner home and will do all sorts of weaving, not only carpets and rugs, but the fancy art stuffs, too.

The parsonage is getting to be the social center for the young folk of the community. Several times a week they gather to play croquet, basketball and other sports. It is being whispered around that some of the grandfathers and their feminine contemporaries are secretly practicing croquet and some of these days they will "happen in" and show the youngsters how it was done "in my day."

Wonder if Grants Pass, Medford and Ashland missed the Wilderville crowd on the Fourth? She couldn't go to Ashland because she had company at home. Fact is, Wilderville is getting a bit ambitious. She is climbing out of the rural community class and is calling herself a burg. Mrs. Ingalls, president of the Ladies Aid, with her co-host of willing workers, Rad Robinson, Sunday school superintendent, backed by the Sunday school, and Mr. Coleman, with the assistance of the community at large, pulled off a Fourth of July celebration to be proud of. The Ladies Aid had a lunch stand where all sorts of delectable eats could be purchased. The Sunday school put on a program of speeches and music and Mr. Coleman managed the sports. The young people sold candy and peanuts and pop corn to create a thrill then lemonade to assuage the thirst.

Mr. and Mrs. Lovelace celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary by going to Ashland to see their daughter, Mrs. Charles Oglesby. They had expected Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy, with their small son to meet them there but were disappointed as the Cassidys were unable to get away. Frances and Willard took in the Fourth and both declare that the three days celebration was not too much.

Mrs. Ben Spaulding and the girls are summering at the mill on Slate Creek. Their house is perched on the bank of the stream and overlooks a pretty pool. It is surrounded by trees and looks invitingly cool.

SKIM MILK RATION FOR CALF

Substitution Can Be Made in Week or Ten Days After Animal is Two Weeks Old.

When the calf is two weeks old, it can be gradually changed from a ration of whole milk to one of skim milk by substituting an equal amount of skim milk for each portion of whole milk removed. The plan of substitution is based on the supposition that the farmer can secure a limited amount of skim milk. A complete substitution can be secured in a week or ten days. When this substitution has been completed, a medium-sized calf ought to be receiving about twelve pounds of milk daily.
