ROAD WORK PROMISED

spend any bond issue money on this road and will not be able to do anything much on it until the next legislative meets and provides funds.

"Under our 2-cent gas tax we have money for maintenance and intend to keep the road maintained to a very high standard.

"However, despite the fact that there were absolutely no funds in the different bond issues for work on the Pacific highway, the present commission has borrowed funds from other sources and work is going on as follows, from Redding to the Oregon line along the Pacific highway:

"The division engineer is now preparing plans and estimates for widening and straightening that portion of the road from Yreka to Gazelle. Under contract No. 415, O. R. Dennis Construction company is doing 17.61 miles of grading and graveling, Shasta river to Upton. Under contract No. 373, the Kaiser Paving company is doing 10.74 miles concrete pavement. Upton to Shasta river, Siskiyou county. Under contract No. 313, the Kaiser Paving Company is doing 10.34 miles concrete pavement, Redding to Siskiyou county line.

"You will see from facts as stated in the foregoing that we are in a deplorable condition. The highway commission is unanimous in thinking that this is possibly the most important road in the entire California highway system. We all would like to finish the stretch from Redding to the Oregon line, and I assure you that when the next legislature meets we shall be very strong in our demands, asking that this be one of the first roads for which funds are provided.

"In matters of this sort, it seems to me that more will be accomplished when conditions are thoroughly understood. Both Oregon and California are interested in the Pacific highway and also in the Redwood highway, which comes through Eureka, Crescent City and Grants Pass. The highway commission of California is deeply interested in having these two roads completed at the earliest possible moment."

DEATH PENALTY FOR CANNIBALS

France Issues Orders Intended to Exterminate Practice in African Possessions.

Paris.—Albert Sarraut, French minister of colonies, who was one of France's representatives at the Washington naval armament limitation and pacific conference, has just signed two decrees intended to exterminate the practice of cannibalism in the French African possessions. The death penalty is imposed on any one killing or trying to kill human beings for the purpose of eating their flesh. Imprisonment of from one to ten years and a fine of from 100 to 1,000 francs are to be the punishment for complicity in such crimes or for eating human flesh. Cannibalism survives, M. Sarraut says, principally under the form of ritual rites or acts of sorcery.

Discussing this subject in Le Journal, M. Fernand Hauser writes: "Doctor Cureau, formerly a colonial governor, assured us some years ago in a work on the primitive peoples of equatorial Africa that cannibalism, as practiced there (and it is practiced, even in regions rich in food resources of all sorts, vegetable and animal), is not due to privation or famine. 'It is simply a matter of taste,' he said, 'a predilection for a certain kind of meat.'"

Cannibalism Called Instinct.
"Cannibalism is then, according to Doctor Cureau, an instinct. It is a custom. The man who indulges in it is not necessarily ferocious. 'He may be a man who is gentle, gay, cheerful and friendly in his ordinary relations'—at least with those about him."

"Doctor Cureau added that he had several times seen evidences that certain tribes make prisoners of war or buy slaves to hold them in reserve, and then kill them and eat them in accordance with their needs."

"Pere Martron, who also made a close-range study of the African negroes, declared, on the contrary, that the cannibals did not hunt men to satisfy hunger. They eat, he said, only the bodies of enemies killed in war and, more rarely, the bodies of those on whom they wish to wreak a terrible vengeance."

"However that may be, Pere Martron and Doctor Cureau both stated that cannibalism is dying out. Coming into intercourse with more civilized tribes, the cannibals feel a sense of shame and soon refuse to admit that human flesh is eaten by them."

Reports for Many Years.
"These are reports dating back some years. M. J. Brevie, chief administrator of colonies, director of political and administrative affairs in the government of French West Africa, says, in his 'Islamisme contre Naturalisme au Soudan Français'—a penetrating essay on native psychology which he has published—that many blacks still practice cannibalism, less from any real need than from an attachment to ancient rites, which, divorced from their primitive significance, appear unintelligible to us, and which they themselves can no longer explain."

"We are dealing here," he declares, "with human sacrifices, intended to disarm hostile spirits, or to produce a sort of physical and moral transubstantiation from the person sacrificed—to the person who eats, the latter thus assimilating the former's strength and qualities."

But whatever may be the reasons which have kept cannibalism alive, the French government is now determined to make an end of it.

Week-End Gardens Are Boon to Stockholm

Stockholm.—The regular week-end exodus of 7,000 industrial workers armed with garden tools is one of the unique signs of spring now appearing in the Swedish capital.

Every one of these amateur gardeners has his own "colony lot" in the large co-operative garden colonies situated in what appears to be country, though actually within the city limits. Here he grows his own flowers and vegetables, and finds a retreat from the factories and city streets.

The 7,000 colonists are grouped into 50 different garden sections in the outskirts of the city, and the administrative work is, in the hands of co-operative garden societies.

The plots of ground worked by individuals vary in size from 1,800 to 3,500 square feet, and the rentals range from $2.50 to $15.00 for the season. Greens, vegetables, strawberries and various other garden products are raised, enough to supply the worker's own table and to yield him a small profit besides.

Hunts Panther With Sponge.
Nunahino, B. C.—Jim Craig of Craig's Crossing, who had shot 130 panthers, brought here the carcass of one that he killed with chloroform. The animal had lamed Craig's son, Duncan Craig, and had scratched Craig's arm. With a lethal rag on the end of a pole, he put the animal to sleep. Then he lassoed it and dragged it from a tree.To Start Whaling in Ross Sea.
Seattle, Wash.—Three steel whalers are being sent to Ross sea, where Rold Amundsen, discoverer of the South pole, noted the presence of whales in large numbers. In Ross sea they are to meet a 12,000-ton steamer from Norway, which will be a floating plant for the utilization of whales.

Non-Detonating Gasoline Works a Full Stroke

Gasolines explode in two ways. One kind explodes with a crash. It detonates.

The piston receives but a single smashing impulse for each stroke. The power of the explosion is over before the piston is half way down the full length of its stroke.

Due to the tendency to explode prematurely, detonating gasoline limits compression in your cylinders.

It causes much of the "knocking" you notice on hills. And the repeated crashing blows increase vibration, thus increasing wear and tear.

The Sustained Explosion

The explosion from Union Gasoline is of the other kind. It is sharp but sustained—non-detonating. It gives impulse to the piston for the full length of the stroke.

Power and efficiency are increased as a result of increased compression, because, as all authorities know, non-detonation permits added compression.

New Speed

This added smoother power means a new "lift" on hills. You take grades with a rush. Your motor doesn't "knock."

There's more snap in your pickup and new speed on the level.

Vibration is reduced, which saves wear and tear. Fuel mileage is increased due to better efficiency all around.

So there are ample reasons for selecting Union Non-Detonating Gasoline.

Union is the product of progressive refining methods. Its quality is governed by exhaustive tests. The research of able engineers and chemists, equipped with every accepted facility for studying refining methods, is constantly devoted to its improvement.
