THE RIGHT SPIRIT

"The citizens of Grants Pass are as loyal in peace as they are in war." That declaration was made Monday by Professor Irving Vining after he had witnessed the Armistice Day demonstrations here. Surely the people of Grants Pass have something in their makeup of which they may well be proud for that was shown yesterday. While neighboring towns were commercializing Armistice Day, Grants Pass was observing it in a way which cannot help but have its effect upon the boys and girls now growing up. There is a spirit of cooperation, of civic pride and of patriotism that cannot be excelled anywhere.

Shop keepers closed on their volition. There was no pressure brought to bear on any merchant and yet everyone took advantage of the opportunity to show his loyalty to the flag. Scarcely a store was seen that did not have its flag displayed. That spirit characterizes Grants Pass from other towns of Southern Oregon and is the spirit that makes for progress.

The extent to which transportation is becoming motorized in California is shown by the annual report of the automobile department of the California Railroad Commission. This report shows that there are 713 motor carriers operating under the jurisdiction of the Commission and they employ 1,699 cars in passenger service and nearly 1,500 trucks and trailers for freight carrying. During the last calendar year the auto carriers of the State transported 21,221,928 passengers.

Under the regulation of the Commission this form of transportation is rapidly becoming standardized and a higher class of service rendered each year. So rapid has been the development of this form of transportation that it is now possible to travel by auto in California from the Oregon line to the Mexican border, choice of valley or coast route being offered. Across-the-State service is given in the extreme north, it being possible to travel by auto using several different stage lines from Crescent City to Fort Bidwell, from Eureka to Red Bluff, to Nevada State line; from Oroville, Chico, Sacramento and Stockton to the Lake Tahoe and Feather River territory; from the center of population to the Yosemite Valley and contiguous territory; from Fresno and Bakersfield and other Valley points to the Coast and to the high sierras.

Out of Los Angeles and San Diego stage lines run in every direction, serving San Bernardino Mountain territory, Imperial Valley, and the vast desert areas that spread over the southeastern part of the State. Many of the stage lines publish joint tariffs and so arrange their time schedules that the necessary change from one line to another is accompanied by a minimum of discomfort. As a result there are few places in California today that are inaccessible to the traveler by auto stage.

The Campanile, one of the landmarks of the campus of the University of California at Berkeley, is one of the world's few earthquake proof structures, according to professors in the engineering department of the university.

It was built in imitation of the famous Italian tower. At the time it was built there was a great deal of discussion as to the practicability of shock-proof buildings. The professors contended that such a tower could be built which would be successful, and others said that it could not. Finally the professors won, and the tower was built as they wished it.

In order to maintain the proper balance of the structure, so as to keep it from falling when an earthquake comes, the walls were made thicker at the bottom. As the walls rise the thickness becomes less, until at the top they are thinner than the average walls. In this way the center of gravity is much lower than it would be if the walls were the same thickness throughout. When an earthquake comes the tower will rock and sway but it will not fall. It works on the same principle as the always upright salt shaker, or the toy dolls which cannot be knocked down.

Although this type of architectural construction is considered to be very good for small buildings, or ornamental towers, it is believed that it will not be a success in the business districts, as the space which would be taken up by the thickness of the walls is too valuable to waste in such a manner.

ASQUITH HEADS PARTY

Instance by the Liberals and many supporters of the government—are infuriated with the administration's policy toward the million and a half British unemployed. Labor leaders describe the Government's plans as mere "shilly-shalley." Although fifty million pounds is to be devoted to the alleviation of unemployment through the institution of public work on roads, railways, canals and mines the Laborites declare that not one-tenth of the sum will be expended this Winter, and meantime the state of the workless will go from bad to worse.

The unemployed are daily growing more restless. The task of the Labor party is to urge the Government forward to every remedial measure possible and at the same time to keep their extreme followers under control and persuade them to proceed by the methods of law and order. Present indications point to this task being both unenviable and hopeless.

Mingled with this grim controversy is the question of tariffs, which has again become one of the outstanding features of British politics. Premier Baldwin came into office pledged not to make any material change on tariff policies. But in the dealings with the Dominion Premiers the Administration has already agreed to a preference within the Empire that is equivalent to the introduction of the thin edge of the Protection wedge. The controversy arising out of this may easily change the entire aspect of British politics.

The tariff issue cuts clean across the face of political parties in Britain. There are as many Free Trade Tory supporters of Baldwin as there are enthusiastic Tariffites among the Liberals and Laborites. In his recent speeches, Premier Baldwin, together with Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer and several other Ministers, has hinted at an "out-and-out" policy of tariffs to "protect home markets." The actual result of this decision may mean a cataclysm in the internal politics of Britain.

But before any actual scheme of tariffs is outlined the present Government is pledged to take the opinion of the country by a general election. To this course the present stings may be the immediate prelude. But such a contest will be an episode of extraordinary interest, with the housewife's cry of "Down with dear food!" opposed to the Protectionist slogan of "Preserve home markets!"

I've Never Found Its Equal

A GOOD cook who only recently used Carnation, writes: "I've never found its equal." She recognizes Carnation's economical and convenient Pure Milk Service.

Forget your former ideas of canned milk! Prove for yourself that Carnation is the only milk you need for daily family use. Remember, it is twice as rich as whole milk because it contains twice the proportion of cream. It is just 100 per cent cows' milk reduced to the consistency of cream. Nothing is added, not even sugar. And nothing removed except a part of the water which we evaporate to reduce the bulk and give you a doubly-rich milk in convenient-sized containers. Our sterilizing (heating) process keeps it pure and safe.

The high quality of Carnation is due to the excellence of the fresh milk used and to the extreme care exercised in every department of the modern Carnation condenseries.

Use Carnation for every milk and cream purpose—as whole milk, as cream with coffee, cocoa, fruits and cereals. Ask your grocer to deliver a supply today and convince yourself.

ARMISTICE DAY A SUCCESS

Altogether the coming sittings of the House of Commons promise to be of exciting and absorbing interest, and their end may coincide with the death of the present Administration.

The Minute Men of Peace must be more alert than the minute men of war, said the speaker, for the very institutions and laws of the nation are questioned today. The Stars and Stripes are lowered behind a smoke screen of anarchism and the fundamental laws of the nation are being usurped, the speaker declared. In urging religious tolerance it was shown that men of all creeds marched side by side into war and that the rabbi, priest and protestant minister worked together and disregarded creed when life was ebbing away.

The boys and girls of the present constitute another problem, according to Professor Vining. It is said that they lack respect for religion for authority and that they have no reverence for the great leaders. Their elders deplore their lack of sincerity, but they are fighting the hardest civic battle ever faced. The men and women of today grew up with strong church, school and civic influence so that they dared not do wrong. These influences have been broken down to such an extent that it is like turning the boys and girls loose in a great forest from which all signs have been removed and in which they must find their own way. Because they don't walk the same way as their parents, people think they are going to the "bow-wow."

mentary laws of the nation are being usurped, the speaker declared. In urging religious tolerance it was shown that men of all creeds marched side by side into war and that the rabbi, priest and protestant minister worked together and disregarded creed when life was ebbing away.

Millions of Bake Day Tests and not one failure—made CALUMET THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

A greater interest in the American youth was urged as signs to help guide the boys and girls along the right paths.

A means of combating the spread of bolshevism and anarchy is by the ballot. The recent election was taken of an example of the lethargy of the voters, for less than 50 percent of the registered vote was cast. Social duties, inclement weather and other minor matters are allowed to keep people from the polls. It required a thoughtful study to cast an intelligent ballot, whether it be national, state or municipal.

The speaker closed with a tribute to the service men. Edw. W. Miller, for the Chamber of Commerce, thanked the speaker for his talk which was declared to have been one of the best heard in Grants Pass for many months. A few more cantonment songs were sung and the program was closed with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Carnation Home Cooking Lessons

By Mary Blake

Have You Missed Any Lessons? Last week I concluded my series of Home Cooking Lessons which has been appearing weekly in this paper.

If you failed to get all the lessons and wish to preserve the course, I will be glad to send a complete set of these Home Cooking Lessons to you without cost. Any of your friends who are interested in them can also receive a set by dropping me a letter or post card.

I am sure if you have followed some of the suggestions in the lessons you will have found ideas or methods which will prove useful to you. In the attractive little book, "One Hundred Tested Recipes", which will be sent you on request, there are a much larger number of directions for making wholesome and nourishing dishes.

Because of the very large part which milk plays in cookery, and the need of having a pure milk supply of a uniform quality readily available, you will find Carnation Milk, recommended in these lessons, a most valuable aid in your kitchen.

The unvarying richness, convenience, and purity of Carnation Milk make it dependable for every milk and cream purpose in cooking—an ingredient upon which you can always depend. It is 100 per cent milk "from contented cows," evaporated to about half its original bulk but with nothing added and nothing removed except part of the water.

Until the can is opened, Carnation Milk will keep indefinitely and because of its perfect sterility, it will keep for several days after opening. Because of the extreme care used in every stage of its production from the dairy to the can, it reaches you in a state of purity which assures you the highest satisfaction in its use.

If these lessons have helped you to use this high-quality milk more understandingly in your cooking or have made you familiar with additional ways in which it can add variety to your meals, I shall feel that they have been worth while.

At any time you have questions about your cooking problems upon which you wish advice, I want you to feel perfectly free to write to me. Any help I can give you will be gladly extended.

Cordially yours, Mary Blake
