SELLING TO THE TOURIST

Next summer fully 2000 tourists a day are expected to pass through the Rogue River valley. Their stay in the valley, however short it may be, presents a golden opportunity to the farmers of the vicinity as well as the merchant. This opportunity lies in the chance to sell them their produce fresh from the gardens or the orchard. In a large number of cases the tourist is in a hurry and does not stop at the city stores, expecting to buy his groceries when he makes a stop for the night. Nevertheless, he will stop at the stands of the farmers, if fresh fruits and vegetables and other farm produce is pleasantly displayed. Small, cull or second grade fruit will not stop him. He will stop when good fruit is shown and will pay the top price for something that is worth it.

The remarkable success of these farmers' stands was demonstrated last summer when melon growers at Dillard were threatened with large losses through inability to dispose of their crops through the regular channels. They got together and decided to erect stands along the Pacific highway where the tourists could see what was being offered. The stocks in these stands were rapidly depleted and the farmers were saved many hundreds of dollars through the plan of merchandizing direct to the tourist, who would not otherwise be sold. This plan is workable and brings in to the community large sums which otherwise would go somewhere else.

In erecting the stands, there should be ample room for parking with signs on both sides to tell the motorist of them. This system is used throughout California with success, not only with fruits and garden produce but also with flowers.

The farmer must put up the good grades of the fruit and throw the rest to the hogs. He hurts his own business and that of the community when he puts up an inferior grade and sells it to some tourist, whom he thinks will never come this way again. In that he is wrong, for the tourists have a way of spreading news of places to patronize and the places to avoid. The Rogue valley should be one of those places where one tourist will advise another to make his purchases.

Sixth street is getting dusty. Whenever a wind comes up this dust is blown from the pavement into the cars and into the faces of those who are using the streets. A good flushing with the fire hose would put the street in good condition so that it would present a clean appearance.

The Bok peace plan may be a good plan to prevent international wars, but it seems to be raising an awful war cloud in the United States through certain solons in congress, who are demanding an investigation to see if it contains "propaganda"

A Portland man, who was convicted of a violation of the liquor laws, says he is going to sell his interests in this state so his family can move away. After a slight detention in one of the Oregon institutions where water is served instead of liquor, that gentleman may follow his family without any regrets being expressed by the lay abiding element of the state.

WHEAT GROWERS CONVE

Delegations From Washington and Oregon at Meeting

Pendleton, Jan. 19.—(A. P.)—Delegations from Oregon and Washington wheat growing districts are here for a meeting today to organize the Oregon Export Commission League, to further the Wallace plan for the marketing of wheat.

Messages to Trains.
An ingenious device for delivering messages to moving trains has been adopted by an Eastern road. It consists of a long-forked stick, with clips at the ends; a cord loop is hung on these fingers, which grasp it so tightly that a gale of wind cannot blow it off, but the trainman may slip it off with ease. To this cord is attached the message. The stick is held out to the train with the fork pointing in the way the train is going. The trainman simply holds out his arm and allows his hand to come between the forks of the stick and the string. The cord is loosened immediately and he carries it with the message attached away with him on the speeding train.

Fountain of Bubbles.
A fountain of bubbles has proved a great attraction in England. A machine is so arranged that 20,000 soap bubbles a minute may be blown with coal gas and sent up into the air. The beautiful effect in colors when the sun shines on this fountain may well be imagined. At nightfall artificial lighting and the use of colored fires add to the beauty and interest. The soap bubble is also suggested as a substitute for pigeons or glass balls in marksmanship contests.

INCOME TAX TIPS

No. 13.

Innumerable avenues of information for checking up delinquents are furnished the bureau of internal revenue. One of these is the "information at source" provision of the revenue act. Under this provision report must be made by all persons, corporations, and partnerships of payments of income to others during the year of $1,000 or more. Information returns as carefully checked with the individual return of the taxpayer to whom such payments were made. Thousands of delinquent and additional taxes aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars have been discovered as the result of this audit.

The act requires report of payment of all "fixed and determinable income," such as wages, salaries, commissions, royalties, etc. The requirement is not limited to periodic payments, but a single payment of $1,000 or more must be reported. A separate return of information for each employee whose salary or wage for 1923 was $1,000 is required of employers. Payment for overtime, fees, commissions, bonuses, and the fair value of board and lodging furnished as part payment for services should be included.

Fraternal organizations and associations are required to report salaries paid officers. Banks are required to report interest paid or credited to a depositor if the total during the year equaled or exceeded $1,000.

A separate report of each payment of $1,000 or more is required on Form 1099. Form 1096, on which must be shown the number of separate returns served as a letter of transmittal. The forms may be obtained at offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices. Collectors, however, are not authorized to receive information returns, which should be addressed to the commissioner of internal revenue, sorting section, Washington, D. C. The filing period is from January 1 to March 15, 1924.

UNITED STATES TAKES UP RUSSIAN PROGRESS

Washington, Jan. 19.—(I. N. S.)—Although President Coolidge and Secretary of State Hughes continue to withhold political recognition from Russia because of alleged attempts to propagandize against American institutions, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace do not hesitate to admit Russia's growing importance as a factor in international trade.

The Department of Agriculture, under the direction of Secretary Wallace, recently completed a special survey of agricultural conditions in Russia, while the Department of Commerce, through United States Consuls and commercial agents in Europe and the official Russian newspaper Izvestia, is keeping in touch with Russian trade developments.

Of considerable interest to American manufacturers is the effort of the Soviet Government to control foreign trade. The Government's basic principle, according to a report relayed to Washington from Copenhagen by Marion Lechter, the United States Consul-General, is that only such goods may be imported as are absolutely necessary and as cannot be manufactured in Russia.

"Even for such products," said the Consul-General, quoting from a bulletin of the Danish Foreign Office, "there are many limitations in order to assure that the total import shall not exceed the total export."

"The Government is straining itself to the limit to increase exports. However, every precaution is also taken to see that the domestic industrial consumption of raw products is first taken care of completely. The Government has recently placed the export of certain products in the hands of a limited number of institutions and companies, so as to prevent competition in purchasing the Russian market. Government corporations have the right to make purchases in foreign countries, but all deals have to be approved by the Government Monopoly Bureau. Such permission is given only after very exhaustive investigation and criticism."

The effort of the Soviet authorities to establish an excess of exports over imports has met with success, according to an abstract from Izvestia, made public by the Department of Commerce in a recent survey of current business throughout the world.

The Izvestia said that during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1923, exports were valued at 199,100,000 gold rubles and imports at 197,700,000 gold rubles, thus representing a favorable trade balance of 1,400,000 gold rubles.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is principally concerned with what is described as Russia's "agricultural come-back."

Pumps Shoot Water.

A pump of peculiar construction lifts water by the direct action of exploding gas. In much the same way that a projectile is driven from a cannon, in trials the machine is said to have proved so economical that it is to be tested for use in a large English project for draining Lake Mareotis in Egypt. If the tests are successful, pumps which will raise a billion gallons of water daily to a height of 20 feet will be installed. It is planned, after the work is in progress, to double the capacity of the pumps first installed, thus making the station the largest known pumping plant in the world.

MOST foot ailments can be relieved or prevented by wearing footwear which laces snugly through the arch, instep and heel.

Examine the shoes which you are now wearing; do they lace together over the instep, cramp at the toes, feel "baggy" through the arch or slip at the heel?

If they do it is apparent that you are wearing shoes which are not adapted to your particular requirements; requirements which are fully met in—
